Soviet Signs Pact Not to Join War on Nazis; Poles Face Protectorate or Partition, Berlin Says; President Returning; Expected to Call Congress

Amendment of Neutrality Act Believed First Roosevelt Aim

By Edward T. Folliard

President Roosevelt, returning to the Capital today, is expected in usually well-informed quarters to issue immediately a call for a special session of Congress because of the threat of war in Europe.

Thus the national legislatures of both the English-speaking powers would be convoked in extraordinary session, Britain's Parliament having been called together for today.

The President is expected to ask the extraordinary session of Congress to do what it failed to do last month—amend the neutrality act so as to make American markets accessible to all belligerents, so long as they pay cash for the purchases and provide ships to haul them away.

This would work to the advantage of Great Britain and France as in the World War days, since they almost certainly would control the seas.

President Roosevelt suddenly curtailed his North Atlantic cruise so he could reach the White House early this afternoon. He is expected to call together at once members of his Cabinet and other key men in the executive branch of the Government. Two Cabinet members, Postmaster General Farley and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, are in Europe.

The cruiser Tuscaloosa, which took the President as far north as Newfoundland on his vacation, was originally scheduled to dock tomorrow at Annapolis. Instead, she was to put in at Sandy Hook, N. J., at 7 a. m. today. An automobile will be waiting to take the President to a special train.

Because of the shallow channel at Sandy Hook, the President will have to transfer to the destroyer Lang, which has been carrying newspapermen, to get to the dock.

Warning to Travelers

How dangerous the American Government considers the European crisis was indicated yesterday when Undersecretary of State Welles warned Americans not to journey to Europe unless they had some "compelling reason." Meantime, American diplomatic officers were advising this country's nationals to leave Germany, Poland and France.

Secretary of State Hull, who returned from his vacation at White Sulphur Springs late yesterday, will meet President Roosevelt at Union Station today. Immediately thereafter he and Welles will discuss with the Chief Excutive the latest confidential advices from abroad.

Once in the White House, the President is expected to talk over the trans-Atlantic telephone with Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy in London, and with Ambassador William Bullitt in Paris.

Finances Discussed

Significant developments here yesterday, aside from the announcement that the President was hurrying back, were:

Disclosure that officials of five Government departments most directly concerned with the threat of war would meet again at 3 o'clock this afternoon. They will continue discussions on evacuation of Americans from danger zones and preserving American neutrality.

Treasury and State Department officials met in Secrteary Morgenthau's office, presumably to discuss plans for meeting an upheaval in the foreign exchange market in the event of war. This country probably would utilize the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund to safeguard currency in foreign markets.

The newly created War Resources Board with Chairman Edward R. Stettinius, jr., presiding, began its work, checking plans drawn by the Army and Navy Munitions Board for M-day—mobilization day.

Foreign Envoys Return

Foreign diplomats began hurrying back to Washington from vacation resorts and calling at the State Department for information. Sir Ronald Lindsay, of Great Britain; Count Jerzy Potocki, of Poland; Ambassador Rene de Saint-Quentin, of France; Ambassador Carlos Martins, of Brazil, and Minister John Pelenyi, of Hungary, were among the day's callers.

The French Embassy canceled all leave for attaches. No such order

Democracies Know The Lineup for War

By Felix Morley
Editor of The Post.

The text of the Russo-German treaty, as made public in Moscow this morning, shows that the agreement between the two dictatorships goes much further than had been generally anticipated. It is far more than a simple pact of nonaggression. It has aspects of a treaty of outright alliance and could obviously be easily converted into an arrangement of that nature.

This historic and world-shaking document, effectuating a close working agreement between Nazi Germany and Communist Russia, carries no excess verbiage. Every word in its seven brief articles has precise and unmistakable meaning. Every word implies a new lineup, of incalculable significance to the entire world.

Article 1 is an act of renunciation of previous policies which could be regarded, by either Germany or Russia, as hostile to their newly-established cooperation. This article serves formal notice on Great Britain and France that if they go to war with Germany they will receive no assistance from Russia. But it goes further than this. It is also equivalent to a formal notice of Russian resignation from membership in the League of Nations, the Covenant of which is in direct contradiction to the current Soviet pledge.

On the other hand Germany, under Article 1, informs Japan that the flirtation between Tokyo and the Berlin-Rome axis is over. Russia now has Germany's blessing to proceed as the Soviet sees fit in the Far East. If Russia should decide to ally herself with China in throwing the Japanese back to their islands such an alliance, says Article 1, will meet with German approval.

Article 2 emphasizes and makes more precise the meaning of Article 1, but also carries an implication of stupendous importance. It says that if Poland goes to war with Germany, to pre-

Tractor Runs Wild and Kills Sidney Howard

Famous Broadway And Film Author Crushed at Home

By the Associated Press

Tyringham, Mass., Aug. 23.—Sidney Howard, playwright, was killed at his summer home today when a tractor he was cranking started up and crushed him beneath the wheels.

Howard was 48 years old and writer of many Broadway hits, including the 1925 Pulitzer Prize play "They Knew What They Wanted."

He was born in Oakland, Calif., June 26, 1891, and was graduated from the University of California in 1915. He did special dramatic work under George Pierce Baker at Harvard's "47 Workshop" and joined the staff of the old Life magazine in 1919 after returning from World War service.

He went into ambulance service on the Western Front and in the Balkans before the United States entered the World War, and later became a captain in the U. S. Army Air Corps.

Howard was one of Broadway's best-known playwrights. His first hit was "Swords" in 1921. "S. S. Tenacity," "Casanova," "Sancho Panza" and "Bewitched" followed. One of his most famous plays was "Yellow Jack."

In 1926 he collaborated with Charles McArthur in writing "Salvation."

He wrote the scenarios for the following moving pictures:

"Bull-Dog Drummond," "Condemned," "Raffles," "A Lady to Love," "The Greeks Had a Word for It" and "Christopher Bean." He also worked on "Gone With the Wind."

BoliviaDictator Suicide; Army Chief in Charge

Busch, 35, 'Mentally' Depressed, Says Aide After Shooting

By the Associated Press

La Paz, Bolivia, Aug. 23.—German Busch, youthful Bolivian dictator whose bravery won him the order of Condor of the Andes, died today soon after Propaganda Minister Mario Flores announced that the president had shot himself in the temple.

Flores said President Busch had been "mentally" depressed because of "intense work in the past few days."

Policies to Be Followed

Gen. Carlos Quintanilla, chief of staff of the Bolivian army and veteran of the Chaco War, assumed the provisional presidency by "unanimous determination of the generals, chiefs of garrisons and members of the Cabinet." Three days of national mourning was decreed.

The shooting, first officially described as accidental, occurred at the Busch residence where several friends were guests. At the instance of Mrs. Busch, an operation was performed but the President failed to rally.

Gained Promotion by Bravery

The 35-year-old Busch became President at the age of 33 when he led the army in a bloodless coup.

Quintanilla, regarded as less uncompromising than Busch, left the Cabinet membership unchanged, and issued a message declaring he would follow the policies of the dead dictator.

Bolivia, he said, needed a "strong hand" to "avoid the danger of

Son of D. C. Colonel Killed By Chum in Pistol Accident

The 11-year friendship of Stanley Wetherill, 17, and William R. Strong, 17, both sons of high ranking Army officers in Washington, closed in death yesterday afternoon.

Stanley was shot and killed, police reported, when an English dueling pistol held by young Strong went off by accident while the pair were target shooting on Beach Drive, near Forest Glen, Md.

William rushed his wounded companion toward a Washington hospital. Near Connecticut avenue and Underwood street he found Dr. E. G. Bauersfeld, Bethesda physician, who pronounced Stanley dead.

Dr. C. E. Hawks, Montgomery County medical examiner, examined the body at W. R. Pumphrey's funeral home in Bethesda. He said the bullet had entered the center of the chest, and that a severed artery was the probable cause of death. He said he would issue a certificate of accidental death.

Stanley's father is Col. Richard Wetherill, of 3718 Morrison street northwest, on duty with the organized reserve headquarters in the War Department. His mother yesterday was at Bar Harbor, Me.

William is the son of Brig. Gen. William R. Strong, of 3804 Fulton street northwest, chief of the war plans division of the Army General Staff. Gen. Strong left Washington yesterday with a group of official

German Areas Asked Outright; British Plea Held 'Too Late'

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 23.—Adolf Hitler appeared tonight once again to hold Europe's fate in his hands, adhering firmly to his demands upon Poland, which a reliable informant said now included acceptance by the Poles of a protectorate government.

The demands, according to trustworthy information, were dispatched yesterday to most European capitals as follows:

Unconditional return of Danzig.

Cession of those sections of Poland which were German before the World War: Posen (Poznan)—Pomorze (the Polish Corridor); and Polish Upper Silesia.

Acceptance of a protectorate for the area remaining, similar to that of Bohemia and Moravia, parts of former Czecho-Slovakia.

The British Ambassador, Sir Nevile Henderson, was said to have restated Britain's pledge to aid Poland as an answer to these demands in a call at Hitler's Berchtesgaden home today. Sir Nevile landed at Tempelhof Airport tonight and went at once to the embassy.

"Too Late," Says Hitler

The expose to other governments is said to have contained Hitler's two alternatives for a Polish settlement:

Either Poland accepts these terms and permits Germany peacefully to occupy the sections claimed, or Poland fights, with the result that Germany will see to it that her eastern adversary is partitioned once again as has been her fate in the past.

According to one version Sir Nevile assured Hitler that Prime Minister Chamberlain was continuing his efforts on behalf of peace.

"Too late" was in effect the German dictator's reply, it was ascertained reliably.

[Germany early today (Thursday) advised Great Britain that if she wants to avoid a "disaster" she must act without delay in obtaining satisfaction for the "just and unswerving demands of the German people" against Poland. The warning was made by the semiofficial foreign office organ, Diplomatic Political Correspondence.—Editor's note.]

Hitler, according to the official German news bureau, D. N. B., "left no doubt in the mind of the British ambassador that the obligations assumed by the British government could not induce Germany to renounce her championship of national interests vital to the life of the Reich."

Three Questions

Three questions were on everyone's lips today:

Will the Fuehrer strike on Friday, as it has generally been assumed by Germans in all walks of life as well as those in the foreign colonies of Berlin?

Might he even decide to press the button for a showdown with Poland tonight, in the hope of completing his coup before the British parliament can get together tomorrow?

Will he succeed in persuading the Poles that their position is hopeless, thereby ensuring another bloodless conquest for himself?

Those who still believed Hitler would have his way without bloodshed pointed to assurances attributed to the British prime minister that he was doing his utmost to persuade the Poles to negotiate.

They also pointed to rumors current in financial circles that Mussolini was pressing upon Poland to meet the German demands.

That the British and the French take a serious view of the situation was attested by the fact that all except five British and one French correspondent have left the capital.

Berlin Replaces Guns

Besides these newsmen, only the embassy and consular staffs are still in Berlin; all other French and British citizens have departed.

The German government, too, has a more serious view.

The antiaircraft guns on public buildings, for instance, which peeped forth so conspicuously during the September crisis, were again in place in the capital.

Advices from various reliable sources indicated that since yesterday, from the high Tatra Mountains

Events in Europe Summarized

RUSSIA AND GERMANY signed a far-reaching nonaggression treaty, apparently wrecking British and French hopes of an alliance with Russia, hinting at much closer relationship, and presumably nullifying the anti-Comintern pact.

FUEHRER HITLER was reliably reported now demanding a protectorate over Poland, in addition to war-lost German territory, and threatening a "partition" of Poland, if Warsaw refuses.

GREAT BRITAIN, thrown into gloom, grimly moved toward a wartime footing on military, naval and civil defense programs.

Stop Europe's 'Race to War,' Little Nations Plead to Powers

By the Associated Press

Brussels, Aug. 23.—King Leopold III of Belgium, in a dramatic appeal for peace on behalf of seven small powers of northern Europe, tonight urged the men on whom events depend to submit their conflicts "to open negotiations in a spirit of brotherly co-operation."

"Under our eyes," the monarch said, "the camps are forming, the armies are grouping, a horrible struggle is being prepared in Europe."

Without making any direct offer to mediate, the 37-year-old King expressed hope that "other chiefs of state would join their voices" to his in "the same desire for peace and security for their peoples."

Leopold's address was made with the approval of the governments of Belgium, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, The Netherlands, Finland and Luxembourg—members of the so-called Oslo group—whose foreign ministers completed a hurried one-day conference in Brussels today.

His stirring appeal came as a sudden climax to the meeting of the foreign ministers, who convened in Brussels on 48-hours notice, telescoped their program into less than four hours and were on their way back to their capitals tonight to resume study of hourly changing developments.

On War Basis, British Cancel Sailings to Reich, Order Blackout

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), Aug. 24. Already moving to place herself on a wartime footing, Great Britain viewed gloomily but grimly the German-Soviet Russian nonaggression pact signed early today in Moscow.

Diplomatic quarters said the pact was a blow to remaining British hopes that the crisis precipitated by Germany's demands on Poland might be solved peacefully by a firm British-French stand.

In particular, it was said, Article 2, apparently preventing either of the signatories from supporting in any way a third power engaged in war with the other, was regarded as carrying unhappy implications for British-French determination to aid Poland if she goes to war over Germany's demands.

Russian Aid Feared Lost

There had been some hope that the British-French front might procure a "benevolent neutrality" from Russia, with access to supplies and possibly leeway for troop movements from the Black Sea. The Russian-German pact, however, it was said, seemed to remove this possibility.

The British foreign office declined to comment immediately on the pact. It was obvious, however, that the reception was a gloomy one.

The German Fuehrer's reported statement that Poland either must yield to his demands or be partitioned came as a staggering blow to British hopes for a peaceful settlement.

The British government was said to have considered the message delivered to Hitler today by Sir Nevile Henderson, British Ambassador to Berlin, as its ace card.

It had been hoped a clear statement that Britain would fight by Poland's side might cause Hitler to give serious thought before risking war.

[The British government intends to strive "until the zero hour" for peace, International News Service said, but early today there appeared hope only in a report Premier Mussolini is working out an "eleventh hour effort" to save Europe from being plunged into war.—Editor's note.]

Diplomats See Gravity

Official circles received reports of the Hitler-Henderson talk in silence but diplomats took the gravest possible view.

Parliament will meet in special session tomorrow to vote the government virtually dictatorial powers to deal with any emergency.

All officers and key men in anti-aircraft batteries of the territorial army were called up, along with an undetermined number of reservists in the army, navy and air force.

Informed quarters said mobilization actually was under way, although it was not being called that yet.

The home office ordered air raid precaution forces to be ready, beginning tonight, for a nation-wide blackout at a moment's notice. All ARP telephones were ordered manned day and night to notify householders.

Fleet Reinforced

An admiralty official said reinforcements were beng sent to the Mediterranean fleet to bring it up to full strength.

Tyneside shipowning firms also canceled all sailings to Baltic and German ports until the international situation is clarified. One vessel en route to Hamburg was called back by radio.

The board of trade issued an order prohibiting export of essential war materials from Britain except by license.

King George VI interrupted his vacation in Scotland to return to London.

Activity at the foreign office and at 10 Downing street, the prime minister's residence, was greater than at any time since the Czecho-Slovak crisis last September.

Crowds stood in Downing street throughout the day, watching diplomats and cabinet ministers enter and leave.

The imperial defense council met in the cabinet room to consider preparedness steps.

Treaty Shatters English, French Hope of Alliance To Save Poland

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Thursday), Aug. 24. Germany and Russia early today signed a nonaggression pact binding each of them for ten years not to "associate itself with any other grouping of powers which directly or indirectly is aimed at the other party."

By the pact they also agreed "constantly to remain in consultation with one another" on their common interests, to adjust differences by arbitration.

The nonaggression clauses bound each power to refrain from acts of force against the other and from supporting any third party which might engage in warlike acts against either of the signatories.

The pact did not include the usual escape clause providing for its denunciation in case one of the contracting parties attacked a third power. This provision has been written into most nonaggression agreements signed in the past by Moscow.

An official communique announced that Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop had a three-hour conference Wednesday afternoon with Molotoff and Joseph Stalin. German Ambassador Von Schulenburg also was present.

Stalin Sees Ratification Signed

The talks were taken up again Wednesday night in the Kremlin and the decision was reached at this time to enter into the pact.

Von Ribbentrop and Molotoff signed the pact in the presence of Stalin.

Ribbentrop, it was announced, will leave Moscow at 1 p. m. today aboard Hitler's private plane and fly to Berchtesgaden to report personally to Der Fuehrer.

Text of Treaty

The text of the pact follows:

The German Reich's government and the Union of the Socialist Soviet Republics, moved by a desire to strengthen the state of peace between Germany and the U. S. S. R. and in the spirit of the provisions of the neutrality treaty of April, 1926, between Germany and the U. S. S. R. decided the following:

ARTICLE ONE—The two contracting parties obligate themselves to refrain from every act of force, every aggressive action and every attack against one another, including any single action or that taken in conjunction with other powers.

ARTICLE TWO—In case one of the parties of this treaty should become the object of warlike acts by a third power, the other party will in no way support this third power.

ARTICLE THREE—The governments of the two contracting parties in the future will constantly remain in consultation with one another in order to inform each other regarding questions of common interests.

ARTICLE FOUR—Neither of the high contracting parties will associate itself with any other grouping of powers which directly or indirectly is aimed at the other party.

ARTICLE FIVE—In the event of a conflict between the contracting parties concerning any question, the two parties will adjust this difference or conflict ex-

Hunter Scores Congress for WPA Layoffs

Acting Chief Terms Relief Slash 'a Real Gamble' With Misery

Congress and business were accused last night of taking "a real gamble" with the misery of the unemployed in a slashing attack by Howard O. Hunter, acting WPA commissioner, presenting the issue to the Nation over the radio.

Simultaneously, Hunter termed "patently false" letters from Congressmen to constituents that said revision of the relief program and laying off of WPA workers after 18 months was proposed by the Administration, citing such letters in his address.

Mingling ironic sarcasm with bitter hammering at the National Association of Manufacturers for wanting to sabotage the entire Roosevelt program, Hunter told the unemployed that if the plans of Congress and business didn't work:

"You might tighten up your belt another notch and look forward to a tough winter."

His address, made over the Columbia Broadcasting System, opened with a blast at an unnamed Congressman from Ohio. This Representative, Hunter said, had written a constituent that WPA Commissioner Harrington had recommended the layoffs and other revisions, with the approval of the President.

Legislation Passed in Rush

"Such statements, which are being broadcast, even in mimeographed form, are patently false," said Hunter. "When the new WPA law was signed by the President, he made it plain that this was one of at least four provisions which were bad and would cause hardships to hundreds of thousands of American citizens."

The House Appropriations Committee which wrote the new relief act was sharply assailed by Hunter, who observed "this legislation was passed in a terrific rush, without sufficient opportunity for discussion or debate."

Hunter said the intent of Congress when ordering the layoffs and in rejecting the $3,000,000,000 lend-spend program, was that private business would absorb the slack.

"This Administration wants, more than anything else, for private enterprise to succeed and profit," he continued. "It wants business to be good. We believe that the best and most American thing that can happen is for all the unemployed to get jobs in private industry.

"I do not, however, feel that it is quite a fair exchange to ask the unemployed to take all the risks at the same time that private industry and idle money refuse to take any. It seems to me that the American way is to continue to provide decent and useful jobs on public projects until such time as private jobs are actually available for them."

Manufacturers Group Attacked

The National Association of Manufacturers, Hunter commented, "was very enthusiastic about defeating the lending bill and reducing the WPA, because, they said, by doing this, it will give industry renewed confidence to expand and employ more people."

"But, now that this is accomplished," he said, "the President of the National Association of Manufacturers came out the other day with a statement that business cannot assume the responsibility for recovery until other New Deal innovations have been abandoned."

NLRB Delivers 3 Decisions in Armour Co. Cases

Armour & Co., about which has been revolving the threat of a general strike in the packing industry, yesterday was involved in three cases in which decisions were announced by the National Labor Relations Board.

Because of declarations by C. I. O. leaders last week that unless Armour & Co. would negotiate on employe representation by unions in its various plants, workers would be called out, Secretary Perkins arranged a conference between company and labor spokesmen to work out a solution.

Local No. 347 of the United Packing House Workers was adjudged sole bargaining agent for production and maintenance employes of the company's auxiliary plants at Chicago, the NLRB announcing 660 employes favored it out of 848 ballots.

An election was ordered to be held at the Omaha plant within 15 days, to determine whether hourly paid and piecework employes want to be represented by the Packing House Workers Union. The NLRB ordered an election within 30 days at the Fort Worth plant for production and maintenance employes.

Gravel Union Rejects Peace Proposal

Action Blasts Hopes Of Federal Conciliators For Early Settlement

Two hundred striking Smoot Sand & Gravel Co. workers last night voted to reject a peace proposal of the Labor Department Conciliation Service.

The rejection came at a meeting postponed from yesterday morning and blasted hopes of Federal conciliators for a settlement of the strike that has tied up local construction jobs amounting to $54,000,000.

Exact terms of the proposal could not be learned but John Shields, spokesman for the Sand and Gravel Union, Local No. 22975, said the men considered it of little value and would not go back to work before a contract with definite hourly wage provisions had been arranged.

Joint Conference Planned

Meanwhile, 250 master plumbers, members of the Plumbers Guild, contractors' bargaining unit, retired to Chapel Point, Md., for their annual seaside outing, as their dispute with Plumbers Union, Local No. 5 remained at a standstill.

Colvin said a joint conference between plumbing faction representatives would be arranged "before the end of the week." Settlement of the two-fold construction strike which has tied up Federal and District buildings amounting to $54,000,000 hinges equally on the return to work of plumbers and sand and gravel workers.

Restaurant Picketed

Simultaneously with the construction strikes, picketing continued at Goodacre's White Coffee Pot, 1016 Fourteenth street northwest. Claude S. Smith, secretary of Local 75, Hotel and Restaurant Employes National Alliance, said six bartenders and eight countermen walked out because of the alleged firing of four waiters for joining the union. No statement was forthcoming at the restaurant headquarters.

The Baltimore office of the National Labor Relations Board confirmed the fact that the union had entered a charge of general interference with and discrimination against Goodacre employes and is investigating the case.

Pendergast Aide Leaves WPA Post

Jefferson City, Mo., Aug. 23 (AP).—Matt S. Murray, a worker in the Pendergast machine, declared today Gov. Lloyd C. Stark had "nothing whatever to do" with his leave of absence from his lucrative post as State WPA administrator.

Stark has carried on a long fight against Murray's administration. The Governor avoided comment. Both Murray and Stark are Democrats.

In Washington the Works Progress Administration said Murray had been granted leave without prejudice until final determination of an investigation of his income-tax returns.

Political Arena

Pittsburgh, Aug. 23 (AP).—A ruling from the United States Attorney General's office placed two Federal prosecutors today in the paradoxical position of being allowed to campaign for county offices—but without "engaging in political activity" in violation of the Hatch law.

After the Hatch law was enacted, United States Attorney Uhl said he would resign, if necessary, to campaign for a judgeship. His assistant, John D. Ray, campaigning for a district attorney post, sent in his resignation.

Assistant Attorney General Kemp asked them to stay in office because of a heavy court schedule, saying in a letter:

"While it is our plain duty as public officials to give the law an honest, just interpretation, it is also our duty to avoid an extreme application that will needlessly prejudice or interfere with the proper conduct of this office."

Indianapolis, Aug. 23 (AP).—Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, says postal clerks and letter carriers, meeting more people in homes and business places than any other class, help spread patriotism.

McCARRAN

He told the United National Association of Post Office Clerks, in convention here, "They impress on the public the steadfastness and stability of the United States Government."

Owosso, Mich., Aug. 23 (AP).—Politics caught up today with Thomas E. Dewey, New York's district attorney, vacationing at his mother's home.

Dewey was visited by Barak Mattingly, Republican chairman of Missouri. The two were in a long conference, but neither would discuss the conversation.

Dewey will see representatives of the Illinois State central committee and the Cook County (Chicago) Republican committee.

U. S. to Enlist Private Funds For Housing

Experts Draft Plan For Quarters to Rent To Low-Income Class

By the Associated Press

Secretary Hopkins set his new coterie of Commerce Department experts to work yesterday on a plan to induce private capital to invest in low-cost housing.

The basic idea on which the group started work was to figure out means of modifying building code requirements or complying with them economically, and suggesting materials and methods which would give the most for the money. The private construction is intended to supplement public enterprises financed by the United States Housing Authority.

The project was the first assignment of the Commerce Department Division of Industrial Economics created yesterday. Richard V. Gilbert, former public finance expert of Harvard University, is diector. He and Undersecretay Noble assigned Robert L. Davidson, James Hughes and Robinson Newcomb to the housing study.

Actual details will not be worked out until these three consult an advisory committee of six prominent businessmen to be named soon. Some working ideas to serve as a basis for discussion were laid down at the meeting. Essentials include:

The work must be done and financed strictly by private business and capital, with the Government only advising and encouraging.

Homes or apartments should be designed to rent to persons with incomes ranging from $1,200 to $2,000 a year. No sale properties are planned for the present.

Building costs should be reduced by using scientifically selected materials and put together to provide adequate strength and efficiency without costing as much as traditional methods. The Bureau of Standards will co-operate.

C.I.O. Denounces A.F.L. 'Treachery'

The C. I. O. contended yesterday that American Federation of Labor proposals to revise the Wagner labor act "constitute an act of deepest treachery to the workers of this country," in a statement by Lee Pressman, general counsel.

The A. F. of L. amendments would curtail power of the National Labor Board to invalidate contracts between employers and labor organizations and would strengthen the hand of craft unions in dealings with the board.

BanAnnenberg Race Tips, Jury Urges States

Philadelphian and 3 Others Accused of Conspiring to Bribe

Chicago, Aug. 23 (AP).—A special Federal grand jury urged Congress and the States today to smash by legislation M. L. Annenberg's international turf news network on the ground that it nurtures illegal gambling.

Although the jury held that Annenberg's interests have enjoyed a monopoly on racing news since January 2, 1935, it did not indict him on antitrust charges, holding the laws were not intended "to apply to activities, which by their very nature are illegal."

Instead it recommended dissolution of the alleged monopoly and indicted the wealthy Philadelphia publisher and three others on charges of conspiracy to bribe a witness who appeared before the jury. They were accused of conspiring to pay $100 to Clarence J. Ferguson, Philadelphia detective, to influence his testimony before the jury. Government attorneys said Ferguson was innocent.

Annenberg, indicted for the third time by Federal grand juries in 12 days, issued a statement terming the presentment "simply one more step in the plan to besmirch me." He contended witnesses before the grand jury included "anybody and everybody whom the Government agents believed . . . would be willing to make wild charges against me."

The presentment said Nationwide News Service, Inc., the Annenberg wire agency, supplies legal assistance to handbook operators, feeds them news in hideouts and deals out "Christmas gifts to judges, city officials and politicians" in one large city.

The conspiracy indictment named Annenberg; Louis Simon, Philadelphia, a close friend; Dominick D. Lynch, jr., described as a Philadelphia night club owner, and Patrick J. Burns, Chicago, an associate of Nationwied's general manager. Bond was set at $10,000 each.

Another grand jury on August 11 charged Annenberg owed $5,500,000 personal income taxes and penalties. Yesterday the same jury named him a co-defendant in a $137,000 case growing out of operations of the Consensus Publishing Co., a Nationwide subsidiary.

U. S. Warns South Of Labor Act Drive

Atlanta, Aug. 23 (AP).—Maj. Arthur L. Fletcher, assistant administrator of the wage-hour division, said today the Government soon would begin enforcement of the fair labor standards act "in a big way."

He told the Southern Garment Manufacturers Association and the Association of Textile Mills and Piece Goods Houses the division was committed to a policy of "keeping everlastingly at" enforcement.

Maj. Fletcher described the law as insurance against a "stab in the back" by a competitor.

Tenant Farmers Appeal to FSA

The third year of Farm Security Administration's drive is bringing a flood of applications for loans to help tenant farmers buy their own land.

FSA officials expect applications for the year to reach between 150,000 and 200,000, compared with the previous two-year aggregate of 148,000. The FSA has $40,000,000 available. About 7,000 loans will be made this year, they estimate.

Speaker Bankhead Willing to Accept 1940 Nomination

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 23 (AP).—Speaker William B. Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, indicated today his willingness to accept the 1940 Democratic Presidential nomination if Alabama voters indorse his candidacy.

He insisted in a statement he wanted Alabama's 22 convention delegates pledged to him only if "a majority of the voters in the primary sincerely favor my nomination."

The state Democratic executive committee may choose and instruct the convention delegates itself or may call for their election in Statewide balloting.

Bankhead has represented the Seventh Alabama District since 1917. He is a brother of Senator Bankhead.

Perjury Charge Asked Against Dies Witness

Committee Accuses Silver Shirt Aide Of Sabotage Attempt

By Robert C. Albright

The Dies Committee investigating un-Americanism yesterday asked the district attorney's office to take "appropriate prosecutive action under the perjury statutes" against Fraser Gardner, of Washington, who sought employment with the committee as investigator.

The committee said Gardner, an employe of Skyland Press, which prints publications of William Dudley Pelley, Silver Shirt leader, "concealed and denied material facts for the purpose of securing employment with the committee as investigator."

In that position, Chairman Dies charged, Gardner "would have been able to act as undercover agent for an organization which is opposed to, and which is attempting to, sabotage this investigation."

Future Witnesses Warned

The citation to the United States Attorney for the District was made in a resolution adopted by the committee in executive session after the witness previously had appeared before the group in closed and in open session.

At the same time, Dies, in a formal statement, warned all future witnesses that "where the facts warrant, a similar procedure will be followed." He continued:

"Witnesses have been warned that deliberate misstatements of fact before the committee will not be tolerated where such misstatements are material and are clearly made.

"The committee feels that the circumstances in the present case are of a specially grave nature. Here we appear to have an individual who sought employment with the committee as an investigator and who, upon two occasions, under oath, denied any connection with any organization or individual under investigation."

Dies said the committee "has had strong suspicions that similar attempts have been made in the past and it has received information concerning other individuals who have held themselves out as representatives and investigators for this committee when, as a matter of fact, they had no connection with this committee."

Denies Pelley Connection

A surprise witness, Gardner, whom committeemen said has consistently sought employment as an investigator and was called before the group yesterday to state his qualifications, was said to have denied connection with Pelley, or with Pelley's anti-Semetic Silver Shirts during the morning closed session.

Later, under cross-examination in open hearings, he admitted he worked for the Skyland Press, publisher of Pelley's magazine, Liberation.

The red-haired, stocky Gardner asked to read the committee resolution and statement, and then told reporters: "It looks like I'm being made the fair-haired boy for the rest of them."

"I'm not a Silver Shirt, never was a Silver Shirt, and never will be," Gardner said. "I never made any arrangement with William Dudley Pelley, and he never paid me."

Gardner was said to have been highly recommended to the committee by several Southern Democratic Senators, but committeemen declined to disclose their names.

Gardner identified one of his indorsers to reporters as Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland. He said he mentioned Tydings because he believed Tydings would confirm that he sought a job as a Dies Committee investigator last November, whereas he testified his employment with Skyland Press was not until March of this year.

Other Business Sidetracked

The committee had expected yesterday to go forward with Henry D. Allen, unofficial co-ordinator for several alleged anti-Semitic and pro-Fascist groups, but sidetracked all other business for swift action in the Gardner case.

Before the committee ordered Gardner's testimony sent to the district attorney "for such action as may be deemed warranted," the 37-year-old job-seeker was charged by Dies with an effort to join the committee staff so as to undermine its work. Dies declared, "This is a clear case that Pelley and the Silver Shirts have undertaken by this method to secure information in advance and sabotage this investigation."

Gardner asked permission to make a statement, and then said, "As God is my judge, the Skyland press, Pelley or any other people connected with him know nothing of my application to this committee."

Called to the witness stand between questioning of Gardner was George E. Sullivan, Washington attorney. Sullivan testified that Gardner offered to sell him information as to the next hearings of the committee, who would be called as witnesses and the subject matter. While Gardner denied he claimed inside sources or sought to sell such information, Sullivan stuck to his story.

Discord in Musician's Marriage

G. W. U. Instructor And Newspapermen Disappeared July 28

The body of Edward J. Duffy, 36, Washington newspaperman, for which a search had been made since his disappearance July 28, was found yesterday on the shore of Cedar Island, Me., the Associated Press reported.

DUFFY

Duffy, who was head of the journalism department at George Washington University and associate editor of the United States News, accompanied by his wife, Mrs. Adrienne Mann Duff, and their 7-year-old son, Michael, had been visiting Mrs. Duffy's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Charles R. Mann, of Washington, at their summer home on Bailey Island.

The clothing of Duffy, found on the beach, brought about the search, joined in extensively by the Coast Guard, which culminated yesterday with the finding of the body on Cedar Island, not far from Bailey Island.

Relatives said Duffy frequently went for a swim just before retiring and soon after arising in the morning. They feared that he might have become tired while swimming and drowned. He was born here August 28, 1903, receiving his preparatory education at Central High School. He was a graduate of Dartmouth College in 1926, and had a varied experience in newspaper work in Washington. His home was at 2424 Foxhall road.

17 Witnesses Face Trial Over Parade

Seventeen members of Jehovah's Witnesses were tried at Police Court yesterday charged with parading without a license on Wisconsin avenue northwest, July 8.

The trial developed into an argument between Defense Attorney Julius C. Peyser and Assistant Corporation Counsel James Reilly when Peyser contended the Witneses were not parading but merely "walking along the street carrying placards."

Judge Edward M. Curran continued the case for one week. Before the trial, he ordered forfeited $100 bail posted by Ethel M. Nunnally, another marcher, when she failed to answer.

Farm Cash Income Off $120,000,000

Despite a 33 1-3 per cent increase in Government payments to farmers, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimated yesterday that farmers' cash income will drop to $7,900,000,000 this year from $8,020,000,000 in 1938.

The bureau attributed the 4 per cent decline partly to smaller volume of products to be sold and partly to lower prices. Contributing factors to price declines, the bureau said, were larger domestic carryovers and large world supplies of several important farm products, with smaller domestic marketings.

Farm cash income was $8,988,000,000 in 1937, when the highest point in the last ten years was reached.

Teachers Warned WPA Revision Will Wreck Education

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 23 (AP).—An executive of the American Federation of Teachers told their convention today "havoc" caused by Congressional revisions of the WPA will be perceptible in September, "when hungry little youngsters come in to start the new school year."

Mrs. Mary Foley Grossman, a Philadelphia junior high school teacher, predicted the "havoc will extend beyond the economic deprivation.

Mrs. Grossman, federation vice president representing Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware, said the effect of the act would be felt in cultural projects of the WPA.

"The education projects have been almost completely wrecked, neighborhood centers that have become a tremendous force against delinquency are being compelled to close because their teachers and directors have been taken away," she said.

Hearing Told Of Big Industrial Insurers' Returns

Many industrial insurance companies have accumulated "substantial surpluses" and have earned "phenomenal returns" for their stockholders, Gerhard Gesell, Securities and Exchange Commission counsel, yesterday told a subcommittee of the temporary National Economic Committee.

He made his observation in opening the sub-committee's hearings on ramifications of the industrial insurance business. Gesell said:

"The two largest life insurance companies in the United States, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. and the Prudential Insurance Co. of America, are primarily industrial insurance companies. Their combined assets of over $8,000,000,000 account for 31 per cent of the assets of all United States companies selling either ordinary or industrial insurance.

"The SEC submitted a table showing that on December 31, 1937, there were 83,383,454 industrial insurance policies in force in the United States, with a total maturity value of $20,103,953,000.

Reward Offered For Identity of Body in Trunk

Detective Chief Bernard W. Thompson announced yesterday a $25 reward for information leading to the identification of the body of a colored woman that was shipped in a trunk from Washington to Atlanta, Ga., August 16.

Thompson said that his men have been unsuccessful so far in obtaining any information that might lead to solution of the crime. The woman had been shot in the head.

Police have canvassed all truck drivers and persons with trucks for hire in an effort to find who took the trunk to Union Station. Last night an inquiry was started among hardware dealers in an attempt to locate one who sold about 15 feet of new rope with which the trunk was bound.

The woman's body was returned here from Atlanta and is now at the District Morgue.

Hog Output Rises and Prices Drop

Chicago, Aug. 23 (AP).—The sixth anniversary of the Government's pig slaughter program today found the Nation's hog farmers headed for the same kind of trouble that brought on the 1933 curtailment of production.

Stimulated by abundant corn and other feed supplies, hog production has been stepped up sharply to levels nearing those that preceded the Government program and the great droughts of 1934 and 1936. Prices are the lowest in five years. At $5.56 a hundredweight, the average in the Chicago wholesale market yesterday was more than $2 below levels of a year ago and nearly $7 below August, 1937.

The decline in the market during the past two years has been the sharpest since the collapse of prices in 1920-22.

U. S. to Seek Trade Treaty With Argentina

Negotiation Seen as Bulwark to Solidarity Of the Western World

By Harry W. Franz
United Press Staff Writer.

The United States Government, faced by a troubled world situation, yesterday announced intention to negotiate a trade treaty with Argentina, a step regarded by diplomats as tending to bulwark the political solidarity of the American continent.

A State Department announcement stated only the intention to negotiate with Argentina, but diplomats regarded the step of continental importance because the La Plata region is now one of the chief battlegrounds of the entire world, where totalitarian versus democratic trading systems are at issue.

Conclusion of a United States-Argentine pact, after five earlier years of ineffectual "conversations," would, according to diplomatic opinion, put a capstone on the United States' trading program, pave the way for eventual agreements with several other American republics, and broaden the economic foundation underlying the "good neighbor" policy.

Announcement by Welles

Acting Secretary of State Welles, announcing the United States-Argentine negotiations, said that the present commercial treaty, concluded in 1853, is largely obsolete, and added:

"I can think of no better way to promote the Good Neighbor policy and the type of relations which it represents than through instruments designed to bring about a mutually profitable increase in trade."

Ambassador Felipe Espil said improvement of commercial relations could be accomplished without impairing the interests of farmers of the two countries. He suggested friendly political relations would be cemented by economic understanding.

"There is growing feeling among peoples of both our countries, accentuated in these years of international unrest and distrust that those friendly and closer political relations are more essential now than ever," he said. "Negotiations that we will start are a most important step in that direction, and I hail them with deep satisfaction."

Welles expressly stated that the list of products on which the United States might consider the granting of tariff concessions "does not include fresh, chilled or frozen meat," or types of wool which would conflict with production in this country.

The announcement also revealed that the differences over Argentine exchange control have been solved so far as the negotiations are concerned.

Hearings to Open October 16

Public hearings on the proposed agreement will open here on October 16. The department listed commodities in which the United States might consider granting tariff concessions.

Many of the commodities are already standard articles in trade of which the quantity shipped varies according to domestic supplies of similar products, or the market prices. The list of possible Argentine tariff concessions was not announced.

The apparent readiness of the Administration to face farm organization political opposition in order to extend the inter-American trading program, was discussed among diplomatic observers.

Diplomats presume that this Government regards the Argentine negotiations as a "key" to the general betterment of inter-American relations.

An Argentine agreement would make a Uruguayan agreement equally logical in view of similar products. A Venezuelan pact is in the final stages of negotiation.

Better trade relationships between the United States and Chile already have been sounded out, and this country recently gave a "helping hand" economically to Paraguay and Nicaragua.

Bridges Hearing Moved to Prison

San Francisco, Aug. 23 (INS).—Preparations were made tonight to transfer the Harry Bridges deportation hearing from Angel Island to San Quentin Prison.

Bridges' attorneys will question Earl King, former head of the Pacific Coast Marine Firemen, Oilers, Wipers and Watertenders Association, and Ernest G. Romsey, also a marine fireman. They will seek to show through the testimony of King and Ramsey that Stanley Morton Doyle, anti-Communist crusader from Portland, Oreg., made improper inducements to them for testimony against Bridges, charged with being a Communist.

Poland Clings To Hope West Will End Crisis

'Aggressive' Stand Of Britain, France Seen as Salvation

By the Associated Press

Warsaw, Aug. 23.—A belief that the Western powers friendly to Poland were embarking upon "aggressive" diplomatic tactics to maintain peace inspired a glimmer of hope in Polish circles tonight that the European crisis might be diminished.

There was, however, a general recognition of the critical state of affairs and a feeling, noted in other capitals, that the issue of peace or war might be decided within a very few days.

The Polish cabinet council, in secret session, ordered additional defense measures, the nature of which was not disclosed.

Great interest centered upon the news that Sir Nevile Henderson, British Ambassador to Germany, had seen Adolf Hitler at Berchtesgaden.

Beck Sees Envoys

Poland saw his call as a "last warning," as the evening newspaper Czas put it, that Britain was firmly determined to aid the Poles if they were attacked.

While Sir Neville was seeing Hitler, the British Ambassador to Warsaw, Sir Howard Kennard, and the French envoy, Leon Noel, talked at length with Foreign Minister Beck.

Reports from Bucharest that Rumania had re-emphasized a policy of neutrality brought the observation in responsible quarters that "this was to be expected."

The Polish telegraph agency reported a brief frontier clash between Polish and German soldiers at Vlucznow, a small village opposite Breslau.

German Planes Sighted

An official communique announced two alleged violations of Polish teritory by German planes.

Military quarters denied German allegations that Polish antiaircraft batteries and a Polish warship had fired on three German passenger planes.

Poland has an estimated 1,000,000 troops under arms and expects to be able, in event of war, to mobolize 6,000,000 men.

to the Baltic, the German armed forces along the Polish corridor have been placed in a state of "highest readiness."

At Cologne, reservists and soldiers on leave were being called from homes, theaters and cafes or whever they could be found.

Automobiles, motorcycles and trucks were being commandeered.

Gasolene has become more scarce than ever.

Nevertheless, the propaganda ministry continued its plans for the huge exercises in East Prussia Sunday—planned to commemorate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Tannenberg, in which the Russians, now negotiating a nonaggression pact, were routed by the Germans.

Hitler, it was said, would speak there at 11 o'clock next Sunday morning (5 a. m., E.S.T.).

Significantly enough, there were no signs in the Berlin army garrisons that any preparations were being made for a joint radio reception of the speech by all the officers and men. Such arrangements were othewise always made early in the week.

The German official news agency (D. N. B.) reported three German passenger planes had been fired on Wednesday by Polish artillery and a Polish warship during the day. None was hit.

850,000 Armed, Rumania to Fight Only if Attacked

Bucharest, Aug. 23 (AP).—Rumania, with 850,000 men under arms, declared tonight she was determined to remain neutral if war came to Europe and would fight only if attacked. King Carol and his ministers apparently had defined the policy of neutrality some weeks ago.

The foreign office disclosed Poland was informed "some time ago" of Roumania's intention, and "that intention is unchanged."

Officials declined to say whether neutrality would mean closing the common frontier with Poland.

Rumania's position was nearly as perilous as Poland's, in view of the Russian - German understanding. Russia has claims on Bessarabia, part of Rumania's share in world war spoils. Germany has long sought to exploit the natural riches of King Carol's realm.

Of the Rumanian troops now in arms, 500,000 are reservists called since August 1.

Japan Frames Action on Pact OfNazis,Soviets

Army and Navy Agree To Move Swiftly; Three Courses Open

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (Thursday), Aug. 24.—The Japanese army and navy were reported today by Domei, Japanese news agency, to have reached "complete agreement" on steps to take in reply to the German-Soviet Russion nonaggresion pact.

The nature of the agreement was not disclosed, but there were indications preparations were under way for swift action once the full import of the projected pact is determined.

Three Courses Open

Widespread speculation centered on these three choices if the pact proves sufficiently effective to necessitate a change in Japan's status quo:

Complete aloofness from European affairs while taking advantage of British and French concern there to push her campaign in China, but rising increased Soviet activity in the Far East.

Patching up the rifts of her frinedship with Britain, France and the United States.

Bulwarking the anti-Comintern pact as a self-defense measure.

Previously the navy has been represented as lukewarm, at least, to an alliance with the axis powers, while the army has urged it.

Tokyo Told In Advance

[Berlin commentators, reflecting the view of the German foreifin office, said Japan was duly informed about the intention to conclude such a pact.

[The anti-Comitern pact with Italy, Japan, Spain, Hungary and Manchukuo merely pledged each adhering nation to fight communism within its own confines and to exchange information on how to conduct campaigns against communism, it was pointed out.

[It never was intended to fight communism within Soviet Russia nor in China. Insofar as there was communism in Chinese territory now under Japanese control, that was Japan's business, and Germany was disinterested, Berlin spokesmen explained.—Editor's note.]

Crisis Forces Return of President

was necessary so far as the Polish Embassy was concerned. Everybody there from Count Potocki down to the clerks has been on the job steadily since the crisis developed.

Washington hummed with speculation as the crisis in Europe rose to the explosion point. The President's futile efforts to have Congress amend the neutrality act, his plea that he wanted to "fire another shot for peace," his subsequent assertion Congress was gambling with human lives in assuming there would be no war until it convenes next January —all were recalled as the President hurried back.

That the President would fire some kind of a "shot for peace" was taken for granted here. The shot, in the opinion of well-informed persons, was expected to be the calling of a special session of Congress and reopening of the neutrality question.

Everything in the President's record foreshadows a bold move by him in the present crisis. Twice last September, when Hitler was threatening war over the Sudeten area, Mr. Roosevelt appealed to the Nazi leader to keep the peace. Then, last April, after Hitler had taken over the rest of Czecho-Slovakia and began threatening Poland, the President asked him and Mussolini to abstain from aggression against specific European countries, promising that, in return, America would take part in a general economic conference to stimulate world trade.

The Fuehrer, in a Reichstag speech later, sarcastically rebuffed the President's efforts. Those close to the President, however, say that this in no way cooled his determination to do everything possible to avoid the horrors of a world war.

Planes Affected

The American neutrality act and its possible immediate effect on France was brought up yesterday at Undersecretary of State Welles' press conference. He was asked what would happen to 600 airplane motors France has ordered in this country if France should get into a war. Welles advised the inquirer to read the neutrality act.

That act says that as soon as the President proclaims that a particular nation is in a state of war, no direct war supplies can be shipped to that country.

In the dramatic White House conference President Roosevelt held with Democratic and Republican leaders just before Congress adjourned, the Chief Executive and Secretary Hull warned that the situation in Europe was one of utmost gravity. Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, was reported to have disagreed, saying he too, had sources of information in Europe.

Yesterday, two members of the Foreign Relations Committee, Senators George (Democrat), of Georgia, and Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, said they expected President Roosevelt would call a special session of Congress if war broke out, but that they saw no need for such a session just now.

The President, however, was understood to be determined not to wait for the actual booming of the guns so long as it appeared war was a probability.

Obstructed by George

Senator George, target in President Roosevelt's "purge" campaign last year, was one of the 12 members of the Foreign Relations Committee who voted against reporting out the Administration's neutrality legislation after it had been approved by the House. The committee vote was 12 to 11.

Amendment of the neutrality act would undoubtedly encourage Great Britain and France and might conceivably slow up Hitler.

However, there is another act on the statute books which might prevent England and France from buying supplies in this country on anything approaching the World War scale. That is the Johnson act. Written by Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican), of California, it prohibits extension of credit to any nation which is in default in its war-debt payments to the United States —barrier to arms purchases except for cash to both Great Britain and France.

75,000 Americans Abroad

The State Department estimates that there are about 75,000 American citizens in Europe, 25,000 of them tourists. There are about 2,500 in Poland. How to get these people out of the danger zones in case of war is one of the problems confronting officials.

The "little European squadron" of the Navy, composed of the cruiser Trenton and the destroyers Jacob Jones and Badger left Marseilles yesterday, ready for any emergency orders. The vessels might be used for evacuating Americans.

Admiral Emory Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, is in constant touch with the State Department and is prepared to rearrange schedules and send passenger liners and freighters to Europe to bring home Americans if necessary.

Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, said at Houston, Tex., of the movement to send American boats for American nationals, that war insurance for N. M. U. seamen who operate in European ports would be demanded in new contracts with shipping companies. Present contracts expire September 30.

Besides Farley and Morgenthau, many Washingtonians are under the war clouds of Europe, including Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, John Hamilton, Mrs. Stanley Woodward and Mrs. Emil Hurja. Representative Hamilton Fish is attending a conference at Oslo.

50 Feared Drowned In Brazilian Shipwreck

Rio de Janeiro, Aug. 23 (AP).—More than 50 persons were reported drowned today in the wreck of the coastal steamer Itacare near Porto Ilhos, small Brazilian port. The wreck was caused by a strong wind, but other details were lacking.

The newspaper O Globo said 40 passengers and 10 members of the crew of the combination passenger and freight steamer perished.

War Fears Cause Demand for Wheat

Buenos Aires, Aug. 23 (AP).—War fears in Europe have caused a great demand for Argentine wheat and beef, government sources said today. More than 180,000 tons of wheat have been sold to European buyers in the last few days, it was said, and negotiations undertaken for large sales of beef.

Montevideo, Aug. 23 (AP).—Great Britain has decided to buy 30,000 tons of frozen beef in Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay, it was revealed here today.

France Brings Defense Forces To 2,000,000

Auto Requisition Is Decreed as Reserves Are Rushed to Colors

By the Associated Press

Paris (Thursday), Aug. 24.—Posters calling two French classes to arms were plastered on government buildings early today as France increased her empire forces to almost 2,000,000 men in a partial mobilization against a feared clash with Germany.

Announcement that a German-Soviet Russian nonaggression pact had been signed in Moscow caused deep pessimism in France.

Government sources had said prior to the Moscow announcement that signing of the pact would make it "almost impossible to avoid war over Germany's Danzig claims."

Requisitioned taxis early today in Paris carried "bucket brigades" to various government buildings where they pasted up the posters. Automobiles and trucks also were requisitioned.

Reminders of 1914

The first to be posted were the requisition orders, which read:

"The right of requisition is opened in the Commune of Paris beginning Thursday, the 24th of August, 1939, at zero hour."

Little knots of early morning homegoers drearily read the posters. They winced, then made their way home darkly mindful of a repetition of the exhausting death struggle of 1914-1918.

A few wept in the rain-washed streets.

French government officials had clung to the hope the German-Soviet pact would not be signed but would be dragged into endless negotiations.

France took no chances.

Shortly after Premier Daladier, with Gen. Gamelin, walked grimly out of an emergency national defense council meeting in the war ministry, a blunt communique was issued:

"Due to the international situation the government has decided to complete the military measures already taken in recalling a supplementary contingent of reserve soldiers."

As if to banish any doubt as to what that meant, officials added the call was being made by posters plastered on the walls of police stations, town halls and other public buildings.

When the posters bearing the crossed tricolors are used to call troops it means only one thing—at least partial mobilization.

Auto Requisition Decreed

It means that the men who have finished their two-year term of military service during the last two years are already called, as well as certain reserve specialists.

[The war ministry tonight issued a decree that all motor vehicles, cars and buses are to be requisitioned, effective at midnight, the United Press said. Posters announcing the measure appeared on the streets. It does not mean that the cars are actually to be seized, but only held at the disposal of authorities in case of emergency.

[Special trains were transporting thousands of reservists toward principal concentration points behind the Maginot line. The movement was toward Metz, Verdun, Bar le Duc, Charlesville, Rheims, Sedan and other points familiar in the World War of 1914-18.—Editor's note.]

Reports from the French Ambassador, Robert Coulondre, at Berlin, said the Nazis planned on taking Danzig before August 31, but French sources said that the magnitude of the crisis left any concern about Danzig far behind.

[It is widely reported in Parisian diplomatic circles today that upon the return to Berlin from Moscow of Nazi Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop, tomorrow night perhaps, there will be delivered a lightning stroke by Germany, International News Service said.

[But the stroke, certain French sources say, will be directed not at Poland but at Hungary, and will take the form of an ultimatum, demanding political and military concessions and the right for German troops to cross Hungary.

[Such an ultimatum could result in war if Hungary resisted, which resistance would, in turn, depend to a large degree upon Poland, Rumania, France and England.—Editor's note.]

The French view was simply that Germany's military preparations and press campaign, diplomatic moves and all the machinery of her "war of nerves" had gone too far to stop if the effect of a quick signature of the pact in Moscow was added to it.

Poland After World War—Poland as Hitler Wants It

This is how Poland was pieced together as a post-World War nation in developments following the Treaty of Versailles. Today's European crisis revolves upon Hitler's determination to get back parts of Poland which Germany had clusively by friendly exchange of opinions, or, if necessary, by an arbitration commission.

ARTICLE SIX—The present treaty will extend for a period of ten years with the condition that if neither of the contracting parties announces its abrogation within one year of expiration of this period, it will continue in force automatically for another period of five years."

ARTICLE SEVEN—The present treaty shall be ratified within the shortest possible time. The exchange of ratification documents shall take place in Berlin. The treaty becomes effective immediately upon signature.

Two members attached to the British military mission, it was learned tonight, are leaving tomorrow for London, presumably to report and to get instructions.

The discomfited British-French missions, which began negotiations August 12 with Russia for a tripower military alliance, conferred.

The news was announced in Berlin long before it was in Moscow. Russians, who learned only last night through a broadcast that Von Ribbentrop had arrived at 1 p. m. yesterday, read a Tass communique in Thursday morning papers that their country was now pledged not to fight the nation they had been taught to hate.

"Spheres Divided"

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Thursday), Aug. 24.—Nazi Germany and Communist Russia, long-time ideological enemies, entered early today upon a ten-year nonaggression pact which smashed what hopes Britain and France may have held to align the Soviet in their bloc.

The agreement was even more far reaching than many observers had expected.

Von Ribbentrop reported the conclusion of the treaty to Fuehrer Hitler at Berchtesgaden at once, and made arrangements to leave Moscow this afternoon for the Fuehrer's mountain retreat to make a personal report.

The understanding in its broadest sense, was felt in political circles here to mean a definite "burying of the hatchet" as far as Nazi diatribes against communistic Russia are concerned.

Article Four, foreign observers immediately pointed out, rules out the possibility of Moscow still joining the London-Paris front by stating that neither Germany nor Russia will associate itself with any other grouping of powers which directly or indirectly is aimed at the other party.

At the same time many diplomats believed that the same article meant collapse of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo pact against communism and perhaps a free hand for the Soviets in dealing with Japan in the Far East.

Informed persons considered Article Three, providing for "consultation regarding questions of common interest," as especially significant in the light of the present conflict between Germany and Poland.

They cited an editorial in the well-informed Essener National Zeitung yesterday morning which remarked:

"It may be assumed with certainty that in the Moscow talks a division of the mutual spheres of interest will be arrived at which will correspond to the wishes of the German as well as the Russian nations."

This was interpreted as hinting at the possibility of another partitioning of Poland should the present dispute lead to forceful measures.

Protectorate Sought

Hitler also was believed to have told Britain's Prime Minister Chamberlain in a detailed memorandum that if Poland resisted Nazi claims and decided to fight if would mean the partition of Poland. In the event of peaceful settlement, however, Germany would consent to a setup which would put the Polish nation under a German protectorate.

Whether Germany and the Soviet actually got down to concrete cases in connection with their "common interests" could not be learned here.

The treaty also provided for a settlement of all differences hereafter by "friendly" discussion and arbitration.

Roosevelt Plea For Peace Sought

Montreal (Thursday), Aug. 24 (U.P.).—The Gazette editorially appealed to President Roosevelt today to intervene and preserve the peace of Europe.

"This is President Roosevelt's opportunity," the newspaper said. "A word from him today, coming at the crucial time, would inevitably carry a great influence. Who shall say that it might not have a deciding influence? If there is an element of reason left in Hitler's mind, and if anything can appeal to it, unquestionably it lies in the United States. It should not lie dormant. We do not believe it will lie dormant.

"Nearly a year ago Mr. Roosevelt made representations to the German and Italian dictators in the interest of world peace. There was no war then. The rulers to whom the appeal was directed know the weight it carried. Now another great chance offers itself to the United States and to its President.

3 Chileans Here After 12,000-Mile Trip by Truck

By the Associated Press

Three representatives of the Chilean government arrived here yesterday by motor truck after a 12,000-mile trip from South America which they said demonstrated the possibility of completing the Pan-American highway.

The men, who left Santiago eight months ago, are Juan M. Hidalgo, Luis Pizzaro and Gregorio Vasquez. They will go to New York next week. Their truck will be placed on exhibition in the Chilean pavilion at the World's Fair.

Hidalgo said in an interview at the Chilean Embassy that their truck was the first motor vehicle ever to visit some of the regions through which they traveled.

17,811 Square Miles Sought By Nazis

By the Associated Press

Adolf Hitler's reported demands for Polish territory gained by Germany in the eighteenth century partitions of Poland and lost in the World War encompass 17,811 square miles with a population of 3,896,010.

The territories are:

Pomorze (Polish Corridor) 6,326 square miles, population 935,643.

Poznan (Posen), 10,242 square miles, population 1,967,865.

Upper Silesia, 1,243 square miles, population 892,500.

Special Cable to The Post

Paris, Aug. 23.—Railroad stations throughout France were crowded tonight with young men, some in uniform and others in civilian clothes, boarding trains for the east—the German and Italian borders.

In the south, Senegalese troops from the African colonies were being moved from barracks 20 to 30 miles from the frontier.

In the north, trains were speeding eastward, carrying thousands of men of all types—workmen from factories with knapsacks on their backs and bottles of red wine in their pockets, young doctors and lawyers, salesmen and farmers.

The mobilization is going forward more rapidly than had been anticipated. It began slowly late Sunday night, after the first reports had been received of the Soviet-German nonaggression pact. It speeded up last night, when confirmation was received of the rumor that German mobilization for war was nearing its peak.

Slips Presented at Station

The machinery of French mobilization has been moving all day—not general mobilization, but the last steps prior to that order. Telegrams have been sent to reserve officers, and men for the ranks have received white slips of paper, about the size of post cards. Afternoon and night these slips are being presented at the railroad station barriers.

At the Gare de l'Est, the east station of Paris, crowds of men stood in the square before the building, on the facade of which were three large signs with red arrows, reading "Entree des Reservists," and pointing the way.

At the doors reserved for mobilized men were regulars in brown steel helmets. The platforms were reserved for the men going to the front. Trains were leaving every ten minutes for Rheims, Belfort, Metz, Strasbourg, Thionville and Nancy, near the Maginot Line.

It was a motley crowd. Some were in khaki and others in the horizon blue of the old army. Most wore civilian clothes and many carried suitcases or packs. A few went up with nothing but the suits they wore and the caps on their heads.

Almost No Laughter

There were women there—mothers and sisters—and fathers, who wore ribbons of the Legion of Honor and the Croix de Guerre on their lapels. It was a quiet and grim scene. No band played, and a few wept. There was almost no laughter.

The scene was duplicated throughout the country. The crowds certainly were smaller in the villages and towns of the provinces, but the feeling was the same.

It was estimated that France had 1,000,000 men under arms Monday morning, but tonight she may have 1,300,000. There will be more tomorrow. These figures are only guesses, but the mobilization is on, and may reach its end in a few days. Already buses have been called off the Paris streets and sent to the frontier districts.

French Envoy, Ciano Confer For 35 Minutes

Italy Reported Ready To Stand by Axis Ally if War Breaks

By the Associated Press

Rome, Aug. 23.—The French Ambassador and the Italian foreign minister were reported reliably tonight to have advised each other what their nations would do if Adolf Hitler marched into Danzig. Ambassador Andre Francois-Poncet, whose nation is pledged with Britain to aid Poland, talked with Count Ciano for 35 minutes.

(Paris sources said the French cabinet had instructed her ambassadors to advise interested European governments that France stood by her Polish commitments to fight if Poland resists an aggression.)

Sir Percy Loraine, the British ambassador, called upon Count Ciano earlier in the day.

Ciano Plan Reported Ready

[The International News Service in a dispatch from London, said that despite official denials, it had learned Ciano would call the British, French, and Polish ambassadors and lay before them plans for a peaceful solution of the Danzig and Corridor problems.—Editor's Note.]

Ciano was reported to have told Francois-Poncet in effect that Italy would stand solidly with her axis partner, Germany, in peace or war.

Informed quarters tended to believe that the meeting had drawn lines tighter, and were more apprehensive of the peril of events of the next few days leading to a European war.

Count Ciano also conferred with German Ambassador von Mackensen, presumably on the joint plans of the axis partners.

Italy Prepares for War

Through the evening, informed sources echoed the idea that the Ciano-Francois-Poncet meeting was "most dramatic," each conferee holding his own.

Italy's war preparations went forward apace. New coastal guns were erected in numerous places and antisubmarine chains were stretched across port entrances at Naples, Vivita Vecchia, and other places.

It was evident from Fascist newspapers that Rome as well as Berlin hoped to get more out of the brewing crisis than the return of Danzig to Germany.

The press declared frankly that it would be necessary also to restore Germany's war-lost colonies, and satisfy Italian claims on France for privileges in Tunisia, the Suez Canal and Jibuti.

Outward signs of military activity were lacking. Premier Mussolini and his officials were silent. A fervent desire to avoid war was expressed in the newspapers. But many foreign observers believed Italy was ready to march.

Italian authorities have let it be understood that Alpine garrisons on the French frontier are on the alert and strong. Foreign diplomatic observers believe that anti-aircraft defenses are well manned.

The fascist press showed an uncompromising attitude urging London and Warsaw to avert the threat of war by letting Germany have Danzig without a struggle.

Reconciliation Forecast

Giovanni Ansaldo, who often reflects the views of Foreign Minister Ciano, forecast in the Leghorn newspaper, Il Telegrapho, that negotiation of the German-Soviet nonaggression pact would be followed by a reconciliation between Russia and Japan.

The Japanese Ambassador, Toshio Shiratori, talked with Count Ciano last night. Foreign observers have considered the chances of a three-power alliance somewhat less favorable since Berlin's negotiations with Moscow became known.

German Papers Turn Columns Over to War News

Berlin, Aug. 23.—German newspapers have virtually abandoned interest in everything except war, and only the sports page reminds readers that life is going on.

There are three stories in the news published now. The featured story is still the Polish campaign of terror against Germans. It describes incidents of entire families murdered by maddened Poles, and warns that a Polish attempt to obtain payment for food supplies delivered to Danzig indicates a new Polish campaign to starve the Free City into submission.

The second story is the continued exultation over the "centuries-old friendship between Russia and Germany."

The third story is the serial warning to Britain to stop inciting the Poles to persecution of innocent Germans living in Poland.

Luxemburg Prince To Visit Roosevelt

The State Department announced yesterday that Prince Consort Felix of Luxemburg and his son, Crown Prince John, would arrive in Washington Sunday to be the guests of President Roosevelt.

The royal party will dine at the White House and remain there overnight. After an official luncheon Monday, they will leave for New York.

anarchy." The army, he asserted, was determined to "guide Bolivia along the road of stability."

Last April Busch assumed a "totality of power" and became dictator of his predominantly Indian-populated country of 3,000,000.

Idolized by the masses, Busch had antagonized powerful groups in the nation's economic, political and social life by sweeping measures giving control over all foreign exchange to the state, nationalizing the Central Bank, canceling Standard Oil Co.'s concessions in Eastern Bolivia and making civil service mandatory.

Busch was born of a German father and a Bolivian mother of Spanish descent. He was only a lieutenant when the war with Paraguay over the Chaco started in 1932, but soon gained promotion by bravery.

Ascending to the Presidency, he announced a "planned economy," but denied any similarity with foreign ideologies.

One of his favorite measures was "cultural conscription" to provide elementary education for the elementary masses.

Recently his government had completed large barter deals with Germany involving the trading of Bolivian oil and raw materials for German manufacturers to be used in development of the country.

Britain Cancels Baltic Sailings

Halifax, Home Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare, Lord Chatfield, minister for the co-ordination of defenses, and other key ministers.

Among the diplomatic callers was United States Ambassador Kennedy, who talked with both Chamberlain and Halifax. He was cheered by the crowds as he left the foreign office.

Lord Kemsley, newspaper publisher, who recently visited Hitler, also saw the prime minister.

Halifax had a talk with Count Edward Raczynski, Polish Ambassador. Both Poland and France were informed in advance of the message sent to Hitler by the government.

Both Chamberlain and Halifax will make statements on the international situation in Parliament tomorrow.

The foreign secretary will broadcast Britain's case to the world tomorrow night from 10 Downing Street, where Chamberlain made his dramatic statement two days before the Munich conference last September.

The Institute of London Underwriters issued a new schedule of drastically increased minimum war risk rates, which apply to all vessels sailing on or after tomorrow. Rates of Mediterranean and Baltic cruises were more than trebled.

[The situation, in the terms of several highly placed diplomats and statesmen, is "exceedingly serious, International News Service said.

[One high official declared:

["This is the greatest crisis that Europe has faced since 1914. The crisis is reaching a breaking point within 72 to 96 hours."—Editor's note.]

[Although British statesmen conceded the treaty lacked the hoped-for loopholes, it was stated that categorical conclusions were impossible until Moscow's interpretation was forthcoming. The Post's special correspondent said. Stalin, it was said, probably obtained some assurances from Von Ribbentrop concerning the intentions of the Reich both in Poland and in other secondary states in eastern Europe.

[Yet, the provisional view here is that Hitler would not have sacrificed his minimum demand for Danzig, and that the Soviet Union must be prepared at least to see the Free City become part of the Reich.

[If such is the case, the question remains whether Great Britain and France in the end will be prepared to come to the aid of Poland to prevent such a development—this in the full knowledge that, at least the Soviet Union would be barred from lending any aid whatever to Poland's allies.—Editor's note.]

Britain Dims Lights, Ready For Blackout

Essential Lamps Are Masked in Anticipation Of Enemy Air Raids

Special Cable to The Post

London, Aug. 23.—Extensive preparations were made tonight throughout the British Isles to extinguish or mask all lights which might be visible to enemy air raiders.

An official notice from the office of Sir John Anderson, Lord Privy Seal, in charge of air raid precautions, warned the public that in event of an emergency a "complete blackout" would be immediately enforced and that necessary precautions should be taken without delay.

Local authorities throughout the country were ordered to be ready to switch off street lights at short notice.

In London, highway department trucks distributed red hurricane lanterns which were fastened to all traffic islands as they were during the city's trial blackout on the night of August 10-11.

Subway Lights Masked

The London passenger transport board ordered subway guards to mask lights at street level. After the homeward rush hour, employes replaced many ordinary lights on subway platforms and stairways to the street with dim blue bulbs. Station windows facing the Thames, at Charing Cross and other stations along the river embankment were covered with heavy brown wrapping paper.

One large hotel switched off its sidewalk marquee lights and other exterior lights shortly after the dinner hour.

Large advertising signs of Piccadilly Circus were turned off long before the usual hour of midnight. Police visited motion picture theaters and shops advising managers not to leave display signs on longer than necessary and, in any event, not to leave the premises overnight with unattended lights.

At the request of the war office, the London passenger transport board recalled many buses to the suburban garages, where they were held in reserve. Homeward-bound workers had to line up longer than usual at important bus stops.

Blackout Notice Issued

The British Broadcasting Corporation canceled all leaves for its staff.

The blackout notice issued tonight by the government stated that the lighting order, which would be made under emergency legislation, would require all internal lighting in domestic and commercial buildings to be screened sufficiently to be invisible from outside and that all external lighting "except in the case of certain lights required for work of vital national importance" would be extinguished.

Householders were asked to prepare dark curtains or other screens for windows and skylights.

Iron, steel, glass and other commercial plants were advised to obscure the glare of furnaces.

Motorists were warned that in an emergency "drastic restrictions" would be imposed on the lighting of vehicles which otherwise would not be allowed on the streets.

British air raid wardens of the civilian defense corps tonight received orders to "stand to"—to be prepared for a call to duty.

The British Broadcasting Co. announced that the special telephone alarm system for air raids has been placed on day-and-night basis.

Antiaircraft guns on all important industrial plants were manned nightlong.

A public information circular issued last month from the office of the Lord Privy Seal set the number to be evacuated from English cities at 3,000,000.

This would include children, mothers of pre-school children, expectant mothers and blind persons. The circular listed as "evacuable areas" London itself and 36 other cities, towns and boroughs.

10 Million Reported Under Arms In Europe's Land Forces Alone

Military Observers Estimate Rough Balance Exists Between Rome-Berlin Axis and British-French Front

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 23.—Estimates of informed observers—military restrictions preclude any more exact compilation—indicated today that men under arms in Europe, excluding naval and air forces, were more than 10,000,000 men.

General conjecture among military observers has been that in land power a rough balance existed between the Rome-Berlin axis and the British-French front and their associated powers, with Soviet Russia's estimated 2,000,000 men under arms outside the calculations.

The precautionary calling up of thousands of men in the last several days is an almost unknown quantity.

For the purposes of a rough survey, the following figures appear in many instances:

France—More than 1,000,000. Her standing army of 800,000 has been augmented by 300,000 to 600,000 men recently.

Britain—Between 600,000 and 700,000. The British cabinet acknowledged last night that additional personnel was being called up. (This qdoes not take into account Egypt and India.)

Poland—Approaching 1,000,000.

Turkey—300,000.

Greece—200,000.

Rumania—850,000.

Latest Italian figure mentioned has been 1,300,000.

Germany—Between 1,750,000 and 2,000,000.

Considered separately are figures of 150,000 upward from Spain; 300,000 for Yugoslavia, and 200,000 upward for Hungary.

In still another category might be listed 500,000 for the combined forces of Bulgaria, the Baltic states, Portugal and Switzerland.

Britain leads the major world powers in naval strength while Germany has a decided edge in fighting aircraft, best available figures at the United States War and Navy departments showed.

Latest data present this approximate line-up of naval strength:

Great Britain, 2,079,863 tons; United States, 1,755,570 tons; France, 815,531 tons; Italy, 717,920 tons Germany, 541,023 tons.

Aerial power is more difficult to measure, authorities said, but using 10 as an index, one report to the War Department rated Germany as 10, Italy 6, Great Britain 5, United States 4, and France 2.

Germany and Italy, it was said, could put at least 12,500 planes into the air immediately, compared with 7,700 British and French craft. By mid-1941 the United States Army expects to have some 6,000 planes and the Navy expects to have upwards of 3,000.

Neutral Nations Plead for Peace

the parley, the members of the would-be neutral group reaffirmed that they were "ready to collaborate actively in any international effort for conciliation."

The text of King Leopold's appeal follows:

The declaration which I am going to read is made at the Palace of Brussels in the presence of the foreign ministers and in the names of the chiefs of state of the Oslo group.

The world is living in a period of tension such that all normal collaboration between states risks becoming impossible. Great powers are taking measures almost equivalent to mobilization of their armed forces. Do not the little powers have to fear being victims of an eventual conflict into which they would be drawn against their will despite their policy of indisputable independence and their firm desire for neutrality? Are they not exposed to becoming the objects of arrangements reached beyond them?

"Camps Are Forming"

Without even an opening of hostilities, the world is menaced with an economic collapse. Mistrust and suspicion reign everywhere. Under our eyes the camps are forming, the armies are grouping, a horrible struggle is being prepared in Europe. Is our continent going to commit suicide in a frightful war which would know neither conqueror or conquered, in which spiritual and material values created by centuries of civilization would founder?

The psychosis of war is invading the homes, and although conscious of the unimaginable catastrophes that a conflagration would constitute for all humanity, public opinion is abandoning itself more and more to the idea that we are being fatally drawn to it. It is necessary to react against so somber a resignation.

There is not, a people—we affirm it with force—which wishes to send its children to death in order to take from other nations the right to exist that it claims for itself.

Certainly the interests of the states are not all the same. But do there exist interests which cannot be better reconciled before than after war?

May the conscience of the world awaken. The worst can still be avoided, but time is pressing. The evolution of events may soon render all direct contact even more difficult.

Let no one be deceived. We know that the right to live should be based on a solid basis and the peace that we wish is peace in respect for the rights of all nations. Durable peace can only be founded on a moral order.

Does not wisdom command a truce in the war of words, in excitations, and menaces, to accept discussion of the problems posed? We solemnly formulate the wish that the men on whom the course of events depends accept submission of their differences and their claims to an open negotiation in a spirit of brotherly co-operation.

That is why, in the name of His Majesty, the King of Denmark, the president of the Republic of Finland, Her Royal Highness the Grand Duchess of Luxembourg, His Majesty the King of Norway, Her Majesty the Queen of the Netherlands, His Majesty the King of Sweden, and in my own name, each one of us acting in accord with his government, I issue this appeal. We express the hope that other chiefs of state will join their voices to ours in the same desire for peace and security for their peoples.

Tomorrow, hundreds of millions of men will be with us in heart to stop the race to war. May those in whose hands rests the fate of the world reply to these sentiments and realize the desire, many times manifested by them, to settle in peace the difficulties which separate them.

Then, but only then, immense hope will be reborn capable of dissipating the heavy atmosphere of anguish which weighs on the world as the breeze coming from the sea suddenly dissipates the mist turning the earth back to the light.

Ship Insurers Ponder Rate Rise

New York, Aug. 23 (AP).—The War Risk Rate Board, composed of representatives of American firms which insure maritime shipping, met late this afternoon to decide whether premiums should be increased in the light of the present European situation.

The session, which was private, followed earlier action by Lloyds of London, which trebled war risk rates.

'Black' Invaders Contact 'Enemy'

Plattsburg, N. Y., Aug. 23 (AP).—An invading "Black" army of 18,000 regulars and a corps of 36,000 National Guardsmen, the "Blue" defenders, felt each other out tonight along a 16-mile front. Sharp advance guard fighting occurred at scattered places late in the afternoon as three "Blue" columns made contact with the enemy.

Browder Holds Nazi-Soviet Pact Will Help Poles

New York, Aug. 23 (AP).—Earl Browder, leader of the Communist Party in the United States, asserted today it was "nonsense" to suppose that the Russian-German nonaggression plan was a blow to Poland—"the kind of nonsense which is very valuable for Berlin."

In a mass interview, which took place before terms of the pact were announced in Moscow, he declared it was instead "a great contribution to world peace," and would actually help the Poles.

"Hitler agreed (to nonaggression) because of the impossibility of attacking the Soviet Union. He must be faced with a similar impossibility of attacking Poland," he said.

New York, Aug. 23 (AP).—The Deutscher Weckruf und Beobachter, official organ of Fritz Kuhn's German-American bund, appeared on the stands today with a notice that it would publish in next week's issue "a full report on the German-Soviet nonaggression pact."

There was no other news or comment from the bund or its officials.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN
Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills. Adv.

Ottawa Awaits British Moves, May Mobilize

Canadians Anxious; Australia Pledges 'Complete Support'

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 23.—Prime Minister MacKenzie King and his cabinet prepared for an all-day meeting tomorrow as Canada awaited anxiously events in Europe and the emergency session of the British Parliament.

Defense Minister Ian Mackenzie said plans prepared months ago would be put into effect immediately should Britain become involved in war.

The ministers expected to be advised promptly of Thursday's developments at the Parliament session in London.

Government officials looked on the situation with utmost gravity. Defense Minister Mackenzie said his department was ready to take all necessary steps for the security of Canada.

These steps would involve mobilization of defense services, for which it is understood some 50,000 trained men are available, to guard against invasion, disorder and sabotage.

The prime minister indicated no armed forces would be sent outside Canada without the consent of Parliament. He told the last Parliament there would be no conscription in Canada under his Liberal Party regime.

Australia's "Complete Support"

Sydney, Australia, Aug. 23 (AP).—Australia's determination to give Britain "complete support" in war if peace efforts fail was announced today by Prime Minister Robert Menzies after a cabinet meeting.

India May Mobilize

Bombay, Aug. 23 (AP).—Reports from Simla, India's "summer capital" indicated mobilization orders might be issued for Indian Army reserve officers as a result of the European situation.

Air raid precautions are being taken at all ports and oil tanks and factories are being camouflaged.

Malta's Defenses Manned

Hongkong Volunteers Asked

Hongkong, Aug. 23 (AP).—In line with precautions taken in other British colonies, this empire outpost is preparing for any emergency, arising either from the presence of Japanese troops along the colonial border or from European disputes.

Wives of the English army personnel were informed today that there was a possibility they would be sent to a "safe" place within the next few days.

Two appeals were broadcast for registration of all British women and children. The press will advise tomorrow that all "nonessential" women and children leave Hongkong.

Border roads have been mined, and British men over 40 were asked to volunteer for "second line" auxiliary work in connection with the colony's defense corps.

Gibraltar Guns Trained

Gibraltar, Aug. 23 (AP).—Elaborate military preparations were made here today as boom defenses were placed in the harbor and all guns manned 24 hours. Plans were prepared for evacuation of women and children.

Daladier devoted almost all his time to national defense problems but found opportunity to receive Poland's ambassador, Jules Lukasiewicz, and the British charge d'affaires, Ronald Campbell.

On his part, Foreign Minister Bonnet also talked with Count Kuehn Hedervary, the minister from Hungary.

Bonnet, despite the crush of diplomatic work, did not cancel his dinner date at the United States Embassy in honor of Postmaster General Farley. There he talked with Ambassador Bullitt.

Gen. Auguste Nogues, commander of France's North African forces, talked with Daladier and Bonnet concerning all of French North Africa.

Through all these obvious military preparations the country remained calm.

Don't Put Beef On Black Eye; Eat It and Retaliate

Government scientists aimed a knockout punch yesterday at the idea a piece of raw beefsteak is a fine remedy for a black eye.

If you're unlucky enough to acquire a "shiner" and someone provides beefsteak, the scientists said the thing to do is to eat the beefsteak and apply a cold compress to your eye, then retaliate.

This advice was issued as a part of a campaign by consumer experts at the Agriculture Department to educate the public regarding what the scientists termed "fallacies."

Mrs. Luckett, a trustee of the association, said that about 35 persons here are descendants of Wolfert Gerretse Van Kouwenhoven, head of one of the five original "bouwerties in New Amsterdam (New York) in 1625.

States Collect $346,000,000 To Aid Jobless

The unemployment compensation taxes, a new item for the coffers of the States, accounted for more than three-fourths of the $424,812,000 in miscellaneous taxes collected by the 48 States in 1937, the Department of Commerce reported yesterday.

New York led in miscellaneous taxes, with collections aggregating $85,615,000, while Ohio was second with $52,723,000. Their positions were reversed with respect to the unemployment compensation tax, Ohio receiving $51,445,000 and New York $47,858,000.

The figures for Virginia, Maryland, Delaware and West Virginia, follow:

Virginia—1937, total miscellaneous receipts, $6,269,000, compared with $2,093,000 in 1932; unemployment compensation, $4,369,000.

Maryland—1937, total, $7,758,000 against $486,000; unemployment compensation, $6,907,000.

Delaware—1937, $2,965,000 and $500,000; no figures for unemployment compensation.

West Virginia—1937, total, $6,682,000 and $1,504,000 in 1932; unemployment compensation, $5,099,000.

Boy Shoots Friend With Dueling Gun

observers for the war games in Plattsburg, N. Y.

Mrs. Strong went to the home of Col. Wetherill upon learning of the shooting. Friends said that the two boys had long shared an enthusiam for hunting and had made frequent trips for hunting and target practice through the woods near Bethesda.

Bethesda police reported first word of the shooting came shortly before 3 p. m., with the call from Dr. Bauersfeld. Sergt. James McAuliffe and Private Robert L. Dutrow, attached to the Bethesda substation, met Dr. Bauersfeld and William at Connecticut avenue and Underwood street.

The body was driven to the Pumphrey funeral home, and Dr. Hawks and Chief Charles M. Orme, of the Montgomery County police, were called.

Accident Reconstructed

Following the medical officer's examination, William took police to the scene of the shooting, and there reconstructed the accident.

He and Stanley had known each other, he said, for about 11 years and were close friends. Several days ago William turned over the pistol, an English dueling gun, one of a pair owned by Mrs. Strong's father, to Stanley for repairs.

Tuesday night they oiled and cleaned the pistol together and yesterday about 1:30 p. m. they took the pistol and a .22-caliber rifle out on Beach drive.

They took turns shooting the rifle at a beer can for awhile. Then Stanley shot the dueling pistol at a target several times, loaded it again and handed it to William.

William shot the pistol once, broke it open and reloaded, then started to cock it. He pulled back the hammer and the pistol slipped in his hand.

His companion, standing facing him 8 feet away, fell to the ground, face downward. William rushed to his aid, turned him over, lifted him into the car and started toward Emergency Hospital.

Police pointed out that the .22 short cartridge was among the least powerful of ammunition. They reported the bullet struck Stanley betwen two ribs, either of which could have deflected the bullet and possibly saved the boy's life.

Dr. Hawks said he would not perform an autopsy. After reconstructing the accident, William was taken home.

Price Increased, N. Y. Milk Strike Ends After 9 Days

Utica, N. Y., Aug. 23 (AP).—Scores of milk trucks roared unmolested toward a famished New York City market tonight as the Dairy Farmers Union ended a bloody nine-day milk boycott with a compromise price increase which it termed "a great victory."

Union delegates voted to terminate the strike that stifled the milk supply of 7,000,000 persons by accepting a compromise agreement calling for a blended price of $2.15 per hundredweight (47 quarts).

The vote on the compromise proposal which had the sponsorship of Mayor LaGuardia was 168 to 17. The minority opposing acceptance of the agreement held out for the original strike demand of $2.35 per hundredweight.

The proposal also was accepted by the nonstriking Metropolitan Milk Producers Bargaining Agency.

Youth Questioned In $10,000 Del. Extortion Plot

Seaford, Del., Aug. 23 (AP).—A young man was taken into custody today for questioning about a letter that ordered two local men to turn over $10,000 on the threat of bodily harm.

Alderman James K. Phillips said he received the letter last night. It was crudely written with a lead pencil and postmarked at Laurel, Del., at 2 p. m. yesterday.

Phillips said it demanded that he and Robert A. Stewart, a Seaford wheelwright, leave the money at a point near the Seaford postoffice last night.

The alderman promptly notified police, who stationed themselves near the postoffice, but no one appeared during the night.

Detective Charles Wilkins and two policemen this morning arrested the youth whose name was signed to the letter. He denied writing it. No charges were placed against him.

Colton Indicted For Murder in McKenna Case

Father of 10 Accused In Shotgun Death On Upper 13th St.

McKenna's sister, Mrs. Francis Jean Reuter, told police that her brother shoved her to one side when Colton came toward them with a shotgun in his hands. She said she shouted to the man not to shoot but Colton fired and her brother fell.

"I asked him why he had done it," she said, "and he did not answer."

Detectives who questioned Colton said he told them that McKenna and another man made him drink liquor which he believed was poisoned.

The indictment was one of 29 presented to Justice Letts by the grand jury yesterday.

Heavy Odds

Things are certainly looking up for the men from "down under." Not since 1919, when they last carried off the Davis Cup, have chances been so favorable for another victory for the Australians. The "observers" are all saying so. Observers, who usually range in identity from the reporter himself to an expert who wishes to guard his anonymity, are unqualifiedly gloomy about the United States' prospects for keeping the cup, especially those enthusiasts who sat on the sidelines at Longwood and watched two magnificent Australian teams sweep their way, almost unimpeded, to the national finals.

The lone optimistic voice is that of Capt. Walter Pate, of the Davis Cup team. He believes their victories may make the Australians overconfident. It is no wonder that a certain swagger should enter their stride, at least not to anyone who contemplates the overwhelming scores by which the "down under" men trounced our best teams. So there is little comfort in this "overconfidence" idea. It would take the most appalling amount of overconfidence to fill the gap between those scores and an American Cup victory.

The possibility of Yugoslavian victory over Australia in the interzone finals appears to be slight. That little country, caught in the middle of the European whirlwind, is too busy these days trying to steer clear of annihilating forces to devote much thought to its tennis. The Yugoslavian players, so far as their own country is concerned, rank almost as forgotten men. Until a few days before sailing tourist class, they were not sure they could manage the trip, and have had little practice on grass courts.

To get here at all was a decided victory for that team. But its members obviously have spirit and determination to counterbalance their lack of practice and funds. So we wish them all good luck in the contest which starts today. Partly because Yugoslavia deserves it; partly because if they beat Australia the United States might well beat Yugoslavia.

Working Together

When a storm somes, the lambs huddle together for safety.

Should war break out in Europe, the little nations of the Oslo group—Belgium and Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Finland and the Scandinavian kingdoms—would find themselves in an extremely awkward and dangerous position. That is why, with war clouds gathering, they are now seeking ways and means of closing their ranks for added safety.

The Oslo nations are determined to remain neutral and to defend their neutrality with every ounce of strength they possess. But individually they are weak and almost helpless. Individually they are no match for any powerful nation determined to use their terrain as a corridor for an attack against the enemy or to lay hands on their resources for military purposes.

The most populous among them—the Netherlands—has a population of less than 9,000,000, while Norway's inhabitants total less than 3,000,000 and Luxembourg has a population of some 300,000. What is more, every one of these little nations has resources which the belligerent great powers would need—Danish and Dutch agricultural products, Belgian and Luxembourg metallurgical resources, Swedish ore, Finnish timber, etc. The temptation by one belligerent bloc or the other to seize these resources would become very great in the sort of war to be expected nowadays.

No wonder, then, that the foreign ministers of these seven nations are meeting at Brussels this week to consider how to protect their neutrality. Together they compose a far from insignificant force. They have a total population of close to 35,000,000 and their combined military establishments could give an excellent account of themselves. Warm supporters of collective security in the days when the League of Nations was a going concern, they are now seeking to establish something like collective neutrality.

That, however, is the negative side of the Brussels meeting. There is also a positive side. The Oslo nations realize that the best way to preserve their neutrality is to help prevent war. So the first point on the agenda is the question of how the Oslo group can best serve peace.

It may be beyond their power to do much now. But if the will to peace has any vitality left in Europe, the little democracies of the Baltic and the North Sea may be counted upon to sustain it.

The Sands Run Out

Sir Nevile Henderson, the British Ambassador to Germany, yesterday personally delivered to Chancellor Hitler, at Berchtesgaden, the statement of British policy prepared in London on Tuesday night. This statement, issued after the announcement of the pending Russo-German nonaggression pact, reaffirmed the British pledge to fight in defense of Poland if that country deems its independence menaced. If force is employed against Poland, the statement said, "His Majesty's government . . . . are prepared and determined to resist it to the utmost."

It is reported from Berlin, though as yet without official authentication, that Hitler's reply to this clear and definite warning is that he can in no way modify the ultimatum he is preparing to present to Poland. And the demands in that ultimatum, it appears, may go far beyond all that Hitler claimed early this year.

In his Reichstag speech of April 28 the chancellor summarized these as the return of Danzig and a corridor through the Polish Corridor providing direct connection between East Prussia and the rest of Germany. To offset these concessions Hitler was willing to give Poland a free harbor in Danzig, to recognize all Polish economic rights in that city; to accept the present German-Polish boundaries, regarding them "as final," and "to conclude a 25-year nonaggression treaty with Poland."

The report now is that Hitler, presumably encouraged by the Russian attitude, is preparing to demand not merely the unconditional return of Danzig, not merely the surrender of the entire strip of territory which gives Poland access to the sea, but also the cession of all Polish territory, including a large proportion of that country's mineral wealth, taken from Germany by the Treaty of Versailles.

Such terms would immediately reduce Poland to the status of a third-rate power. And in all probability they would foreshadow the total extinction of the Polish republic, much as the loss of its richest territory last October prepared the way for the disappearance of Czecho-Slovakia a few months later.

If these reports from Germany are true, and they are so specific that they must be taken very seriously, Poland must either fight or forever abandon her claim to national existence. And if Poland elects to fight, in such a cause, Great Britain and France will almost certainly fight also. Their plighted word, reiterated with the utmost seriousness this week, is at stake. But even beyond national honor, the national existence of these two democracies is endangered.

The elimination of Poland, together with the developing Russo-German rapprochement, would make the Reich immeasurably the strongest European power. Once this end were accomplished, both France and Great Britain would exist, and maintain their present empires, only on German sufferance. And German sufferance, as exercised by the Nazis, is not a basis of existence which any democratic people can willingly accept.

So it begins to look as though Hitler is really determined to wipe Poland right off the map, regardless of what that ambition may involve. Such unrestrained aggression is not necessary to the Fuehrer's oft-stated ends. He could probably, as a result of Russia's equivocal attitude, obtain by negotiation much of what he claimed to be his whole objective early this year. As the British cabinet said on Tuesday "there is nothing in the difficulties that have arisen between Germany and Poland which would justify the use of force involving a European war." There is nothing to justify it, but Hitler, nonetheless, contemplates this use of force.

He contemplates it because Nazi Germany is now too strong to require further dissimulation of his plan of conquest in Poland, or elsewhere. There is no longer, it appears, any need for the Fuehrer to temporize or make haste slowly. The way of the sword, is seems, is deemed the short way now, regardless of its awful danger, for Germany and every other nation.

An Object Lesson

Some 93,000,000 miles away a spectacle is drawing to a close which has affected us in very vital and immediate ways. According to astronomers, the violence of recent solar eruptions, easily discernible as sunspots, have been the direct cause of short-wave radio fadeouts, interruption of telegraph and telephone service and erratic behavior of ships' compasses.

To the champion of isolationism in the present international crisis, the solar show and its effects may be offered as something of an object lesson. When his credo stems from the argument that, because of an ocean between us, Europe's problems are not our own and the less we concern ourselves with them the better, he shows himself up as a very short-sighted fellow indeed.

In a world of constantly accelerating proximity and interdependence, such reasoning is sophistry of the most naive order and must end, if followed, in national disaster. We certainly stand less chance of separating ourselves from what is taking place across 3,000 miles of water than across 93,000,000 miles of space.

When Black Is White

The Russian sell-out to Hitler has had at least one constructive result. It has silenced, one may hope for all time, the pathetic nonsense talked by those who have sought to regard the Soviet Union as a factor operating with zealous idealism in behalf of democracy and peace.

Hitherto the Communists and their fellow travelers have harped incessantly on the theme of the "popular front" and its importance as an agency for combating fascism. And some who like to call themselves "liberals" have taken this seriously in spite of the abundant evidence that cooperation with communism has everywhere proved disastrous for all who have been misguided enough to try it, Spain being a salient case in point. It is a line which will be more difficult to argue from now on.

Abundant evidence of this is found in yesterday's issue of the Daily Worker, the Central Organ, Communist Party, U. S. A. It endeavors, in a long and bumbling first-page editorial (continued on page 6), to prove that by the recent Russian action "German fascism has suffered a serious blow in prestige in its own country as well in the world." The case, needless to say, is not proven. Admittedly it is rather difficult to prove, as the Daily Worker asserts, that "The people of Poland . . . . realize the firm position of the Soviet Union in uncompromising support for their freedom and independence."

The complete intellectual dishonesty of the Communist position is well illustrated by this feverish attempt of the party organ to prove that black is white, in order to justify the wholly opportunistic gyrations of the Moscow capitulationists. What is equally apparent, however, is the inability of many Soviet sympathizers, misguided rather than dishonest, to follow the present party lead. As Bruce Bliven, editor of the New Republic, writes, in an interesting symposium conducted by the Baltimore Sun, "Stalin has gone Munich in 1939 just as Chamberlain did in 1938."

This painful fact may have a wholesome effect upon the thinking, if such it may be called, of many of our parlor Bolsheviks. The idea of the "popular front"—a working agreement between "liberals" and communists under communist leadership—never made much headway in this country. Henceforth it is likely to make a good deal less than no advance.

Heat Of The Shade

Mayor LaGuardia, as everyone has heard by this time, is a man of energy and action. He is accustomed to doing things in the most direct way and this often involves flying in the face of tradition.

The Little Flower's latest coup is to discredit the belief that everyone talks about the weather and nobody does anything about it. The mayor is, in a way, doing something very substantial about it. He has undertaken to provide shade for some of New York's steaming pavements.

There are no halfway measures where he is concerned. Together with other Nature lovers, such as the Sixth Avenue Association, and the park commission, he decided that no less than 12 trees should grace each block of Sixth avenue, where formerly only elevator shafts embellished the landscape.

But alas, the machine age reared its ugly head and the new subway ventilators, it was found, would probably prohibit the planting of more than three trees to a block. Each of these would be some 3 inches in diameter and 15 feet high. It is barely possible, but very barely, that the National Shade Tree Conference, meeting this year between the unpastoral walls of the Astor, might next year be able to gather under the shade of the old pin oaks.

Now we don't like to brag, but just about the time that Mayor LaGuardia was promising the shade trees to the Shade Tree Conference in New York, there were other plans under way for Washington trees. The Park Office announced that it was planning to give the District's entire tree population, which is well over a million and includes manifold varieties, a thorough physical examination. A little army of tree surgeons and their assistants are planning to go over the diet and prescribe for the needs of any found to be ailing.

There are many enviable things about New York, but its tree problem is certainly not one of them. To those of us who never have had to choose between lack of ventilation and lack of trees, the alternatives are terrible to contemplate. Something like the frying pan and the fire.

Letters To The Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

Degrading Literature

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was very much interested a few days ago in reading a letter in your columns regarding the demoralizing effects of some moving-picture shows and radio programs of today.

I want to indorse all that was said in that letter; but I would say that the movies and radio are genuine Sunday school classics compared with the literature that is offered for a dime to the always avid youthful reader.

The general run of standard magazines are not any too clean, and the filthy, suggestive string of "True" this and "True" that are bad enough to disgust any normal person; but the particular object of my wrath this morning are "detective" stories. I have no reference to the old-fashioned real detective stories that dealt with the actual detection of crime and criminals; but the great spread of "magazines," if they deserve that name, that pander to the grossest appetites for sexual filth.

What can be done in this country of a free press to stop such a constant output of filth?

A way was found to clean up moving pictures, even to ridiculous extremes in some cases.

Can the editor of The Post not find it desirable to print this letter in 12-point type, double-leaded, with the hope that possibly it will be seen and read by more than just regular devotees of your "Letters to the Editor?" I have no personal pride in the matter whatever, but I really think the matter is deserving of very much more space and better treatment than the run-of-mine letter.

The Walkathon

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On Wednesday evening I witnessed what is called the most spectacular athletic event in the world—the walkathon. I wish to voice my strong objection to the insinuation that this can in any way be called an athletic event.

This walkathon is not a clean sporting event in its present stage. The sprints are definitely inhuman, destructive to health and quite unfit for folks to see, especially children.

It seems to me that the District could offer a higher form of entertainment to its residents and visitors.

Russia's Card

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Assuming that the writer of today's editorial in The Post on "Russia Plays a Card", had no foreknowledge of the imminence then of the announcement of the Russo-German anti-aggression pact, I wish to congratulate him upon his appraisal of the meaning and importance of the trade pact announced a day or so earlier.

It is the occasional evidence, such as in this instance, of capacity to understand the developments of the world situation, so obscure to the average citizen, that makes it important to him to read editorial comment in a paper like The Post.

Eyes And Teeth

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: Christian Nations, for a foundation of their actions and utterances, have the tenets of the Ten Commandments and the interpretations of these by Jesus Christ.

Those non-Christian Nations of this later date who onetime professed Christianity, and who have for the benefits to be derived by some political leader since denied Christ, are in no way bound by the interpretations of right and wrong as set forth in the Ten Commandments.

We may, therefore, be entitled to ask those statesmen of Christian Nations why they still insist in ignoring this basic difference of spiritual set-up when negotiating with non-Christian nations. In no way does a non-Christian violate his beliefs as to his own standards of honor when he takes an oath on a Christian Bible.

Accepting these facts, how can individuals and nations who, in order to gain some supposedly non-Christian benefit, do otherwise than throw away the obstacles which legitimatize wholesale robbery and murder.

If the United States of America and all other Christian Nations will get down to cases and accept the fact that these other nations hold moral standards which are the direct antithesis of Christian, and, with this constantly in mind, do their negotiating accordingly they may be able to save the civilized world.

It would seem in this our country that our statesmen and politicians are too busy with the utilizing of everything to benefit themselves in local party politics. They willingly (or because they have not the intelligence to comprehend) ignore, push aside, or deny facts if by doing so their immediate political party can be perpetuated in office.

When a powerful nation has prepared to carry out the "eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" standard, and have amplified the idea so that it is even more all-embracing, then it is up to the rest of us to prepare to protect our eyes and our teeth . . . and I am not referring to the care that can be obtained from the oculist or the dentist.

Comparative Hardships

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Here is a response to the letter on "Hardships of the Mock War." I think that the man who wrote that isn't a very good soldier—instead a rather poor one. Because if it were real war he would not even have that much. We were notified that we were to have this hardship for a few days and I think that anyone who can't take it as a soldier and not squawk should not be in service but in a nursery.

All I can say is that this Guardsman better not go to a real war because if he can't stand the hardships for two weeks, gracious knows he'd be dead if he had a year of it. Hardship is something we all have to learn to take sooner or later at any cost.

Thanks

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: In the correct interpretation of the words, I can neither be classified as a student or reader. However, I daily read several of the best newspapers and have uniformly found a liberal education in their editorials. I have always found them timely and impartial.

Only on a few occasions have I expressed my gratitude for what the press so lavishly offers at practically no cost to the reader-consumer. Your recent editorial under the heading "And Peace Attend Thee" is my prompting for this note.

On The Non-Aggression Pact

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The news that Germany and Russia are about to sign a nonaggression pact has burst like a bombshell on an astonished world. What is the meaning of this seeming reversal of policy?

Are we to assume that the U. S. S. R. is ready to let bygones be bygones? That she is ready to overlook the fact that Hitler came to power through Red-baiting and a drive on international bolshevism; that he selected Communists and militant labor leaders for his first and most barbarous attacks?

How does this last piece of diplomacy jibe with the international Communist tactic of the Popular Front to rally the broadest masses against the menace of fascism? The Popular Front theory itself is predicated on the assumption that fascism is the enemy of democracy, of culture and of progress in general.

Another factor that we cannot afford to ignore is that since Hitler's rise to leadership, the Red army and the people of the U. S. S. R. have been inculcated with a hatred of everything fascist and with the desire to wipe their greatest enemy, fascism, from the earth. To the Russian people today, fascism and evil are synonymous.

To John Q. Public, this whole business looks like a mass of contradictions and inconsistencies and an additional source of irritation. But to the careful student of history, this latest Soviet maneuver furnishes an example of one of the most delectable pieces of diplomacy he has seen in many a moon.

Hitler's foreign policy is motivated by a two-fold purpose: to defeat the western democracies and cause the Versailles Treaty to be reversed, and, secondly, to bring the U. S. S. R. to her knees and gain possession of Russia's vast resources. Even though the German army is, next to Russia's, the best in the world, the Nazis have long realized that a war on both the western and eastern frontiers would be too hazardous an undertaking. They have been faced with one of two alternatives: either a war with France, or a war with the Soviet Union.

Chamberlain's whole appeasement policy has been an attempt to divert Hitler from his designs on the west and to encourage him in a "Drang Nach Osten." The gift of Czecho-Slovakia to Hitler was for the purpose of facilitating an aggression against the U. S. S. R.

Russia has repeatedly warned the world that the only hope to salvage democracy and culture lay in an alliance of all the democracies, including herself, in a mutual protection alliance or collective security. The Chamberlain group has sabotaged every move in this direction, dilly-dallying over Anglo-Soviet negotiations and behind the scenes trying to figure out what further concessions they could make to hasten a war against the Soviet Union. Under the circumstances, Danzig was a foregone conclusion.

In the light of the above considerations, it seems to me that Russia's latest move is intended in order to bring Great Britain to her senses. It is Russia's way of telling Chamberlain that his little game can be played by two parties and that he'd better hurry up and sign the Anglo-Soviet pact at once or else see all the German forces turned toward the west.

The German-Soviet nonaggression pact also serves to drive a wedge between Japan and the rest of the axis, thereby isolating her in the Far East. With one masterly stroke, the U. S. S. R. has succeeded in splitting the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo axis and in forcing the western democracies to align themselves decisively.

The Post Impressionist

Squeepers

ALONG ABOUT this time of year, when the heat of Washington reaches its most horrific height and automatically assumes first place in every respectable conversation, I begin meeting members of that small but vicious cross-section of our population known among us gastronomists as "squeepers." A squeeper is a person who, as soon as the temperature rises above 80 or 85 degrees F., appears summarily to lose his appetite, and with a woe-begone pallor on his face tells you: "Oh dear, I just can't eat anything when it's so hot. I simply have to force myself to eat in the summertime. Seems like all I want for dinner is a little cottage cheese and a glass of ice water."

I do not know where the word "squeeper" came from. I can not find it in Webster's Unabridged Dictionary. But ask any epicure in good standing what a squeeper is and he will unhesitatingly explain, with the aid of all the monosyllables of his unsanctified vacabulary.

For squeepers I feel not so much contempt as compassion. Lord, how they must suffer! And sometimes how they make others suffer! I remember not so long ago being invited to dinner at a supposed friend's. It turned out to be one of those hot, muggy evenings when everyone's clothes stick on the outside to the chair and on the inside to your skin. There was a rythmic and uninterrupted mopping of brows. In spite of which I was supremely hungry. I did not crave anything grandiloquent like diamond-backed terrapin, venison haunch, or boneless shad with green-walnut catsup, but I was overconfidently set for a slice of roast beef, a moderate portion of leg o' lamb, or perhaps a few morsels of plain chicken. But no. My hostess brazenly announced as we entered the dinning room that she was sure we all would be delighted that we were having a light, hot-weather meal. "You know," she said, "nobody eats much this awful hot weather."

Even then, perhaps, all would have been well if the piece de resistance had not turned out to be what it did—cold stuffed tomato. Even in good cool weather I know of nothing that can be more disheartening, degenerate, disappointing and deceitful than a stuffed tomato. Whether the combination of tunafish, celery and mayonnaise has anything to do with this is beyond my dietetic knowledge to say. To me a stuffed tomato has always demonstrated man's gullibility. Scoop out the insides of a bright red tomato, which at its very best needs all the original features, vitamins, and tout ensemble that God gave it to make it at all edible, fill it with extraneous debris according to the peculiar whim of whatever cook hapens to be on the job, garnish it with a little something green or a slender gherkin, and place it before the average squeeper and he begins to drool and to think he really has something to eat. I once knew a restaurant in downtown Washinfton that prided itself on its wonderful food. It got to be quite a place, with some atmosphere and not altogether unattractive attendants. But it took to serving stuffed tomatoes, somewhat as a specialty at lunchtime, and it wasn't more than a year or two until it had to close its doors. And where once its inviting tables beckoned a hungry public in from the hot street are now a shoe-shining parlor, a flower-shop and, a newsstand.

I suppose I shall be accused of being an epicure, a gourmet, a gourmand or even a glutton. (Definitions: An epicure is choice and dainty and also voluptuous in enjoyment of food and drink; a gourmet is a connoisseur in delicate viands; a gourmand is less fastidious than a gourmet and less voracious than a glutton—says Webster.) I suppose that at times I am all of these, though be it said in my behalf that I am not obese or overweight, I do not suffer from indigestion in any guise, the general impression I convey when eating out is not porcine, and it has even been remarked that my general contours are not unsightly. But, thank goodness, I am not a squeeper. I do recognize that certain foods are traditionally seasonal—turkey for Christmas, watermelon for summer, etc.—but I come from a long line of eaters, and all things being equal I can and do eat just as much, and crave as much, when the temperature is 90 in the shade, say, just after I have played seven sets of tennis in the Washington sun as I do during the more frigid and allegedly more invigorating periods of the year. And so I can only feel sorry for the squeepers.

I don't know, not having studied the weather records, how warm it was on September 6, 1773, at Coirechatachan, Scotland, but James Boswell records how he and Samuel Johnson, traveling among the Hebrides, had for supper that evening "a large dish of minced beef collops, a large dish of fricassee of fowl, a dish of friar's chicken (chicken broth with eggs dropped in it), a dish of ham or tongue, some excellent haddocks, some herrings, a large bowl of rich milk, frothed, as good a bread pudding as I ever tasted, full of raisins and lemon or orange peel, and sillibuba, made with port wine." And, added Boswell, "it was really an agreeable meeting." But what a miserable time a squeeper would have had at that memorable meal, with no stuffed tomato, pineapple sherbet or potato chips. We can picture him all doubled up with the heat, nervously fingering his silver spoons, and moderately sipping his large bowl of very good punch." But ah . . . that was before the days of squeepers. In fact, it was not many years after that, in that same country, that Robert Burns wrote that famous Selkirk Grace:

Some hae meat and canna eat,
And some wad eat that want it;
But we hae meat and we can eat,
Sae let the Lord be thankit.

To which we would add another stanza (pardon our Scotch):

Some hae heat and canna eat
Sae weel as they can without it;
But we hae heat and we can eat
And make nae bones about it.

Soviet Move No Surprise

By Mark Sullivan

Communism & Nazism

WHO CONFESSES surprise? Who could have thought otherwise? Who ever supposed that Russia would help England as against Germany? That one dictatorship would help a parliamentary government against another dictatorship? That one authoritarian government would help a democratic government against another authoritarian government?

For clarity, drop for the moment the names of nations, as nations. In the great conflict that is on in the world, nations are mere geographical units. To understand the conflict, to understand what has just happened, do not think in terms of countries. Think in terms of the ideologies that are in world-wide war. Instead of Russia, think dictatorship, authoritarian government (the type known as communism). Instead of Germany, think, again, dictatorship, authoritarian government (the type known as Nazi-Fascism). Instead of England, think parliamentary government.

Stalin is the head of the Communist world-movement. From its beginning in 1917 the aim of communism has been to impose communism on the world; to break down all other forms of government and substitute communist dictatorship; to eradicate everywhere the system of society which communism calls, with demeaning intent, "capitalism," and to substitute the communist system. To this end, for 20 years, the heads of communism have sent agents and money into other countries, used all their cunning, directed all their diplomacy. From this purpose communism has never desisted.

Having this purpose, what would Stalin do in the situation that arose through the past year? Would he help England—England the very parent and citadel of parliamentary government? There was hardly a chance of it.

ON THE CONTRARY, of all nations, the one in which Stalin was most anxious to break down the system of individual liberty and of parliamentary government was England. (And next to England, the United States.) And the way to do that was not to save England from war. It was to further the involvement of England in war. That would mean the suspension of individual liberty and of parliamentary government; and mean also economic impoverishment, which Stalin could fairly hope might destroy the system of private property and bring communism. To bring about involvement of England in war was, to Stalin and communism, the supremely desirable thing. Next to that, to cause England to spend vast sums in preparation for war would go far toward serving the same purpose. Stalin was not going to join England in a project for the prevention of war (unless the project were something dictated by him in such a way as to promote the spread of communism everywhere).

For Stalin to give help to Germany can be a surprise only to those who do not understand how fundamentally and closely Russian communism and German Nazism are kin. It could surprise only those misled by Hitler's use of outcry against communism as a demogogic device to stir his own people to support his dictatorship.

Hitler's shrieks against Russian communism were as fake as his shrieks against the Jews. First, he persecuted Jews on the ground they were communists. Then he persecuted them on the ground they were rich—they had acquired too much of the property of Germany, and they must be despoiled. First, the Jews were enemies because they were "Bolsheviks." Then they were enemies because they were "capitalists." All of it was merely an emotion-stirring device to make the German people support Hitler's dictatorship. And the outcry against Russian communism was the same, merely a device to stir popular emotion to support his dictatorship.

HITLER IS A dictator. Stalin is a fellow dictator. Between the two, as dictators, the world might suppose there would be jealousy. And so there might be, in a personal sense. But between communism as a system and Nazism as a system there is no real jealousy or hostility. On the contrary there is fundamental identity. The two, communism and Nazism, are brothers under the skin.

Stalin as head of the Communist authoritarian government having the furtherance of authoritarian government as his purpose above all others, and with the destruction of democratic government everywhere as the common purpose of both communism and Nazism, Stalin experienced no hesitation to give help to Nazism as against England.

In Nazism, Stalin recognized the destruction of parliamentary government—as communism had destroyed parliamentary government. In Nazism, Stalin found complete obliteration of personal liberty—as communism had obliterated personal liberty. In Nazism, Stalin found far-reaching destruction of religion—as communism had relentlessly eradicated religion. True, in Nazism, Stalin found some vestiges remaining of the right of private property—but that right was being constantly reduced toward the complete erasure of private property that was communism's first principle.

No, it should be no surprise that communism and Nazism came to agreement. It could be no surprise that Stalin helps Germany, which already has gone far toward the status of communism and does not need to be driven farther on the path. It should be no surprise that Stalin takes the step that will harm England, where parliamentary government and individual freedom are still intrenched.

England is the last that should be surprised. The humiliation of England is not that she failed to achieve alliance with Russia but that she attempted it.

How the Lights Go Out in London

Populace Takes Air-Raid Blackout Calmly And Gaily

By Margaret Davis
Staff Correspondent.

London, Aug. 11.

FOR WEEKS London residents have been wondering what lights had to be dimmed to leave London in the dark. Last night they found out.

Although co-operation was so wholehearted that in a few isolated cases the careless were reported to have had lighted windows and signs smashed by enthusiastic crowds, loopholes in "the best laid plans" were spotted by citizenry, police and air raid precaution officials alike.

Chief flaw in the expanse of darkness was found along railway lines where lights indicated several miles of route to "enemy bombers." Companies have reported, however, that they had arranged with the home office and air ministry to leave essential lights on, but plans for complete blackout in time of war have been worked out.

Rains, which caused the blackout's 24-hour postponement, were responsible for delay in darkening some sections of the city. After gas lamps had been extinguished by lamplighters, electric ones refused to go off due to a fault in the switch.

Other unexpected sources of brightness came from lights which officials had thought would be too small to be noticeable. Although headlights on automobiles were taboo, sidelights from private cars, cabs, coaches and trucks which pushed through London's subdued bright spots during this morning's small hours were collectively strong enough to make extinguished electric signs on nearby buildings readable.

Traffic Lights Stand Out

TRAFFIC LIGHTS, which directed vehicles on the road through thin crossed slits in the black masks which cowered each signal, seemed unusually bright.

Although London was critical of itself, it was not entirely disgruntled by the results of last night's rehearsal for an event it hopes will never take place. Extra police detailed to duty found crowds cheering when the first lights went off and cheering again when errors were rectified. People were more interested than hypercritical and were for the most part orderly. Only when blatant disregard of the blackout was evident, did booing take place. Such an incident occurred when a motorist defiantly switched on headlights. He soon switched them off again.

Gaiety of a New Year's celebration was apparent in the theater section of the city. The grimness of the subject which had made the experiment a reality put no damper on the spirits of those who staged regular "blackout parties" or of those who were out just to look around.

Visitors to London recognized in this approach to the blackout, the matter-of-factness with which Londoners have regarded war scares through the summer.

Residents, who last winter suffered collectively from nerves when certain of their leaders advocated a different foreign policy than that followed while at the same time defense experts frankly said that England was in no position to use force in carrying out foreign policy, seem to have relaxed some.

Londoners Have Learned To Relax

THEY HAVE NOT forgotten the hysterics which sent carloads of women, children and furniture off to the country on more than one occasion during the past year. But they have begun to laugh a little in recalling the heetic quality of those days when one man was known to have bought three houses and moved five times within two months in hopes of finding a place safe from bombs. When overseas visitors have come to tea this summer, gas mask demonstrations have been in order, and owners have complacently recalled standing in a cold rain for half the night to have gas masks fitted for war the next morning. They also speak about branch offices of their businesses, located in the country and in small villages, established last winter to be used as permanent headquarters when war began.

London had her hysterics last winter. She seems now to have relaxed into two schools of thought. First, those who consider Germany a collossal bluffer, who say there never was any cause for worry.

There is another group which does not dismiss the foreign situation so summarily. It breathes easier because it finds England's defenses stronger than they have been in years. It has not only examined the bomb-proof shelter displays in the tube stations, noted the balloon barrages, read about the new robot antiaircraft guns, and inspected the trenches or air raid shelters in the squares and parks. It quotes figures as regards manpower and equipment of Britain's defense program. It supplies manpower for voluntary defense units. It knows and believes in the slogans seen on car stickers, in shop window and official window displays, on billboards, at the base of the Nelson column in Trafalgar Square, in the four civil defense public information leaflets which have been distributed from door to door. "We must be prepared." "Keep it dark" (air raid safety motto). "England expects that you will enroll today." And he may also believe in the billboard displayed prominently through the city which reads "What price Churchill?" Although many who think the opposition's policy enforced would have brought war, also think the opposition's policy would have been different had it been obliged to steer the ship of state through the past 12 months.

Populace Seems Co-operative

WHATEVER ITS THEORIES, the populace as a whole was cooperative in practicing defense last night. There were no legitimate penalties for failure to participate in the blackout. The entire program was carried out on a voluntary basis.

The small god Eros, who stands a guardian angel in bronze over Picadilly Circus, may not have been cloaked in absolute darkness last night, but he saw, along with thousands who mobbed the streets in high holiday spirits, more dark corners in "the hub of the universe" than he had ever seen before.

The glow in the sky from Piccadilly's lights, so bright that strangers seeing it at a distance often mistook it for a fire, was gone after 12:30 a. m. Eros must have heard but could not see those who left for home singing "Show Me the Way to Go Home."

People who had lingered after the theater mingled with those who had come especially to see the "lights-out" show. Some merely walked the streets to look at the darkness below and watch searchlights above pick out an "enemy bomber," many converging upon one victimized plane, a peace-time attack method used for mock battle. Others visited eating places and dance clubs, blacked out for the occasion. Cars proceeded slowly to avoid pedestrians, curbstones and refuges, but their occupants were as hilarious as pedestrians groping along sidewalks.

Night Life Is As Usual

ALL NIGHT WATCHING was not done from the West End, however. Thousands climbed Parliament Hill at Hampstead Heath to watch lights fade across the city in panorama before them. Others took the bridges and inspected the Thames blackout with which the Port of London Authority was pleased. Still others stayed home to test the effects of wallboards and blackout paper on their own premises, in some cases climbing rocks to see the city and also to find out how much light could be "seen from heaven" through their skylights, and to regulate indoor illumination accordingly.

Meanwhile, the ordinary business of London night life proceeded. Fleet street, which for something over three centuries has spent the night alight in the interest of news, was dark but busy. Morning papers were rolled out of darkened press rooms, distributed on lorries lit only by side lights. History was made as reporters had the novel experience of working in rooms with curtains at the windows, in this case blackout curtains.

Early morning wholesale markets functioned as usual, but without lights. Babies were born, henceforth to be known as blackout babies. As time passed and pleasure bent motorists left the roads, traffic speeded up to almost normal. Drayhorses' hoofbeats could be heard as delivery wagons rolled through the city at ordinary speed.

Big Ben also worked in darkness last night. His face, well-loved landmark of Londoners and London visitors, was hidden, but he kept the hours, accurately and vociferously.

The Orient Is Beautiful Now, Americans Told in Invitation

Western-Style Modernization Lends Comfort, but Is Not Allowed to Interfere With Wonted Lure of China and Japan

The Orient is beautiful this year, the "educational and feature service" of a Japanese steamship line suggested yesterday.

The Orient is beautiful, and travelers should visit it, especially Japan, where the landscape has "a parklike quality" and the barefoot farmers look like figures out of old Japanese prints," the announcement said.

The educational service said that "in the Orient, western style modernization is adding to comfort and convenience of American visitors, but it not being allowed to interfere with the wonted lure of countries that have never ceased to enthrall the Western imagination since the days of Marco Polo."

The Japanese steamship officials urged that Americans, follow in the footsteps of Marco Polo and visit China, too.

"Bubbling Well road in Shanghai, the crowded Ginza at Tokyo, the exotic Hateman Gate in Peking, the Great Wall of China as seen from Nankow Pass—who has not yearned these wonders to behold," the announcement challenged. "It would be difficult to find a person of imagination who has not envisioned the mysterious Forbidden City in Peking, the Inland Sea with tiny islands set like emeralds in pale sapphire waters, incomparable Fuji, looming like a white ghost in the perfumed dusk."

"Japan is a beautiful country with miniature gardens where rustic bridges span murmuring brooks and stunted trees lend their fantastic charm; where fat goldfish gleam beneath the lotus and stone lanterns shed their mellow light in the warm evenings."

The steamship officials mentioned one hardship that visitors would face in a visit to the Orient. "It is a bit trying to sit on mats at meal times with your feet tucked under, and chop sticks are a bit difficult to manipulate at first," they said.

The officials explained, however, that "these things are worthwhile pages in one's book of travel memories and slight temporary discomfort is a small price to pay."

You can do it in 60 days—visit China, Japan and even the Philippines, and return home, the announcement said.

Fair Enough

'Young' Idealists

IF THERE is anything left on this world that is beautiful and fine, it is the youth of the human race; and of all the fresh and tender blooms of humankind that toss their pretty heads in the dreary dump that the elders have made of God's creation, American youth is fairest and most intolerant of sham. So when the Young Democrats hold a convention to pledge themselves to progress, which is synonymous with the New Deal, and that clear-eyed young idealist, Senator Joseph E. Guffey, of Pennsylvania, leaps up to fling his boyish challenge to the forces of reaction, despair gives way to joyous confidence in the future.

Senator Guffey, who addressed his fellow youths in Pittsburgh, is an adolescent of 64 years, with only 30 years or so of machine politics and oil speculation behind him; and although inexperience might trick him into small errors of political strategy, one may feel confident that sordid motives are not his. He is just a boy, sprung to the platform to inspire other boys and girls, a lean, lithe figure of youth, selfless in his devotion to his ideals, contemptuous of personal ambition and profit and happily free of the contamination which often comes from long experience in the evil practices and contact with the low political morals of old-style politicians.

EQUALLY INSPIRING is the presence, among the Young Democrats, as a leader and personification of ideals, of the Honorable Ed Kelly, the 63-year-old boy Mayor of Chicago, whose career runs roughly parallel to that of young Guffey. The Kelly boy, too, comes to political life with no experience in the deplorable traditions and practices of machine, or gang, politics, unless you insist on counting some 35 years in Chicago Democratic Party life, which is hardly to be called politics in the ordinary sense, because the Chicago democracy has always been noted for its purity of motive and its scorn for evil, particularly graft.

He presents himself as a Young Democrat innocent of old commitments and associations of the kind which accumulate in the careers of statesmen of greater years and bind them to ways of the past and devil them with fears of the future. Like Senator Guffey, Mr. Kelly hurls himself, young, vigorous and demanding, into the field of national politics, and these two, with Senator Alben Barkley, of Kentucky, a youngster of 62, who with similar juvenile impulsiveness crashed into the Pittsburgh Congress of Democratic Youth, may be looked to with hope and confidence as leaders of the new type of conscience and fresh, unscarred warriors of old ideals.

The world belongs to youth today, and Paul V. McNutt, a kid of 49; Robert Jackson, a squirt but a few months younger, and Aubrey Williams, a professional youth of long experience at the age of half a century, come storming at councils of government to take it over and make it over in the name of a generation which serves warning that it will not abandon its heritage or lose its soul. They are serious, determined youth, these pink-faced boys, and, with their leadership and counsel, the Young Democrats can be relied upon to destroy many evils of the old traditions—particularly, it may be hoped, the corrosive practice of using public money to reduce the underprivileged to a status in which they may be warned to keep their friends in power—or else.

JUST ONE THOUGHT of caution occurs in the contemplation of this exciting outburst of the youthful spirit in the Democratic Party. It may be an injustice to the fine intelligence and unfaltering idealism of the Messrs. Guffey, Kelly, Barkley, McNutt, Jackson and Williams to mention it, but, nevertheless, there is a danger that some evil elders in the party will attempt to move into the councils of the Young Democrats and manipulate and exploit them for mere political purposes. The older men are wily operators, and they will be sure to offer their services and their party influence to the leaders of Democratic youth in return for political support. They will tempt youth with immediate results, such as jobs, contracts and power in the old, sordid meaning of the word, and there is just an outside chance that some inexperienced boys in the new movement will compromise with their principles under pressure.

They are fine, clean-cut boys, the Messrs. Guffey, Kelly, Barkley, McNutt, Jackson and Williams, but their average age is only 50, which seems terribly young, after all. I understand Senator Guffey still speaks with a lisp.

The Lineup for War

serve Polish independence, Russia "will in no way support" Poland. But by carefully refraining from making this pledge bilateral the implication is given that Russia, in the eventuality cited, may support Germany, either with supplies or even with actual military assistance.

Article 3 carries this tacit threat further by announcing that Germany and Russia will henceforth "constantly remain in consultation with one another." There is no place for a pledge of continuous collaboration in an ordinary negative pact of non-aggression. A provision of that character envisages a positive and active alliance.

By Article 4 Communist Russia takes permanent membership in the anti-Comintern Pact, replacing Japan, now blackballed by Germany, in this not very exclusive club. In this article, moreover, Russia pledges herself to have no further association with the democratic powers. Inferentially this article repudiates the Communist International and all constituent Communist parties in the democracies. Earl Browder is told, in effect, that the sooner he joins the German-American Bund the higher will be his rating in Moscow. By the same token Fritz Kuhn is delicately instructed to begin taking subscriptions for the Daily Worker.

Article 5 is concerned with making the agreement watertight and binding. A definite arbitration procedure, perhaps through the good offices of Mussolini and Franco, is established for any differences of interpretation which may arise. There is no possibility of either party backing out on the grounds of misunderstanding, even assuming that the specific wording left room therefor.

Article 6 confirms the rigidity and binding force of the treaty between the Nazis and the Communists. It will "extend for a period of ten years" with no provision whatsoever for its denunciation prior to that date. It may, however, continue longer. While no precise penalties for violation of the treaty are listed, it is apparent that Germany will see that the extraordinary document now signed by Russia is lived up to—or else.

Article 7 put this epoch-making alliance into immediate effect. It is in full effect this minute. There will be a superfluous "ratification" later for window-dressing purposes.

Hitler now has all the material he needs for his speech at Tannenberg on Sunday. And the democracies know, or at least can visualize in advance of war, something of the strength of the combination which they are up against.

Witches' Brew

By Barnet Nover

The German-Russian Pact

EUROPE'S barometer steadily falls. The air is full of tensions that appear to be approaching the breaking point. There is no mistaking the fact that the crisis today is more serious both in its immediate aspects and in its ultimate potentialities than that of last September.

Five months ago, Great Britain and France decided to build a new set of dikes to dam the flood waters of German aggression. They made many mistakes in the process. They suffered if not from a feebleness of will at least from a certain hesitancy in execution. But once having changed their course they did not falter, and they do not appear to be faltering today even though the outlook for them and their partners is grim, to say the least.

DURING THE SEPTEMBER crisis of last year some said that there was a touch of make-believe in the hurried defense preparations undertaken in London and Paris. There is not the slightest sign of make-believe in their actions now. The fleet has been mobilized for weeks. More men are under arms in Great Britain than ever before in peacetime history. And the government has asked for plenary powers, suggesting that the nation be prepared to go on a complete wartime footing.

Of equal moment is the solemn reassertion by the British cabinet of the pledge given to Poland that if the latter is attacked and defends herself, Great Britain will be by her side. And that step was taken after the announcement by Germany and Russia of their decision to conclude a nonaggression pact.

THAT PACT has now been concluded. To call it a nonaggression pact in the accepted meaning of that term is clearly to understate the case. It goes far beyond any nonaggression treaty which Russia has ever signed. It contains no release clause to be found in Russia's treaties with Poland and Italy wherein the pact in question becomes automatically subject to denunciation if the other party to it wages aggressive war against a third power.

What is more important, Russia now stands committed not to associate itself "with any other grouping of powers which directly or indirectly is aimed at the other party."

This means, if words have any meaning, the end of the Franco-Russian alliance. It means the liquidation of all of the obligations undertaken by Russia as a signatory of the League of Nations. And, what is most important from the viewpoint of immediate circumstances, it ends all possibilities of the kind of an alliance which Great Britain has sought to achieve with the Soviet Union.

On the other hand the anti-Comintern pact, at best a red herring, now becomes a dead herring. Or, as the bitter jest has it, Russia herself has now joined the anti-Comintern.

THE SIGNIFICANCE of this dramatic development cannot be minimized. If the peace of Europe is yet to be saved, it will be despite what Russia has done. If war comes, Russia can now rightly be charged with having opened the floodgates permitting the German tide to pour in on Poland.

The connection between the signing of the pact and the report issued in Berlin that Germany now insists on nothing less than the establishment of a protectorate over those parts of Poland she does not plan openly to annex is only too palpably clear.

The pact is for ten years with no provision for denunciation before that period has elapsed. In other words, it is of the same duration as was the German-Polish pact of 1934 which was abruptly torn to shreds by Hitler last spring. More than ever now treaties, particularly those signed by dictatorships, tend to become scraps of paper. There is no reason to believe this one will prove more durable than some others which have been concluded in recent years.

However, what ultimately becomes of the Russo-German pact in the future is of no immediate importance. The important fact today is that when Europe teetered on the very edge of war and when Russia was in a position to give aid to the forces of peace and oppose the aggressions she turned around and betrayed those seeking her friendship and made terms with the enemy.

But what is even more important and what may prove of decisive significance when the history of our grim age is written is that when Russia turned traitor there were other nations that were sorely pressed as they sought to stand their ground.

The Once Over

Quite a few folks will spend Thanksgiving this year wondering whether they are spending Thanksgiving.

F. Roocsevelt, the well-known President, is on a cruise trying to forget Washington affairs, and having very little luck at it.

Football pictures are already appearing in the newspapers, but they don't fool us. We know there is no football epic this Saturday.

The row between the actors' unions has bystanders pretty muddled. They can't figure out what it's all about much better than the actors can.

Gen. Drum says the United States Army isn't what it should be. In case of war it might be necessary to merge it with all those troops fighting for Hollywood pictures.

Dixie Davis has been writing for a national magazine, getting $20,000 for the work. It's getting so there isn't much chance of an author selling anything today unless he has been in a few shootings.

The new 1940 auto models are out and indicate pretty clearly that the self starter and electric headlights have come to stay.

The Nat. Chamber of Commerce is out with a statement that business is a lot of bother. A couple of experts claim they saw some with the naked eye recently. It came close to the hunters and didn't bolt for several seconds.

Olson & Johnson have decided not to run for President and Vice President in the next election on the ground they can't be that funny.

A man won $10,000 on a $2 daily double ticket the other day. To get any money these days you have got to get into something over which the NLRB has no control.

If Houdini was alive today he could get a job as field marshal of the Japanese armies in China at his own price.

Fair Warning, Boys!

Sir Malcolm Campbell drove a motorboat 141 miles an hour the other day. It just goes to show what can happen if one of those things gets out of control.

One thing these war games is doing is giving a chance to thousands of Americans to show that they can walk if they have to.

Jim Farley is completing his tour of Europe, but hasn't been able to find out over there whether Roosevelt wants a third term either.

It Was 'Golden Boy' Who Won on Tuesday Night

Odets' Play Was Based on Lou Ambers' Life; Another 'Find' Center of Gala Week-End; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THE ARDENT RINGWORMS who listened to Tuesday night's broadcast of the Lou Ambers-Henry Armstrong "taffy-pull" in New York, should find an added interest in Columbia Pictures' filmization of Clifford Odet's play of "Golden Boy," next screen attraction at the Earle Theater.

As everyone must know by now, the hero of the Odets opus is a young Italian lad in New York, whose career is pointed toward that of a concert violinist until impatience for fame and fortune impel him to take up the professional prize ring as a short cut to wealth and the commanding opulence he always has craved. This would seem to have nothing much to do with the Ambers-Armstrong fisticuffing, except for the fact that it was upon the life of Lou Ambers that Clifford Odets based the central character in "Golden Boy."

BELL

The plot of the play, and by that token of the picture, so far as I am aware, never has been exploited as biographical. The fact remains, nevertheless— or so I am reliably given to understand—that Lou Ambers, also an Italian, played the violin in an earlier incarnation and had much the same sort of controversy with his dad that is reflected in the dramatized story. Whether he ever would have turned out to be a Kreisler or a Heifetz no one has any way of knowing. Like "Golden Boy," however, he turned out to be a pretty good scrapper.

The role of the father also is modeled from life and presents a more or less true picture of the attitude of Ambers' pater with regard to the comparative values of the two professions that plagued his son. The role was perfectly interpreted on the stage in the Group Theater production of "Golden Boy" by Lee Cobb, who repeats his memorable performance for the celluloids.

Odets secured this authentic background for his drama by hunting out Ambers, learning first-hand something of his aspirations and point of view and then spending a considerable time in his home, where he met the originals of the various other actual characters about whom he wove the fabric of his sensationally successful study of life among the submerged citizens of a great city.

Perhaps it was this knowledge of the inspiration of one of Odets outstanding hits that had some pulling so hard for Lou to win back his world's championship on Tuesday night. That same interest, of course, will carry over into the theater when "Golden Boy" opens on the screen as one of Columbia's major efforts of the new season.

And while we are on the subject, local fight fans will have an opportunity to witness the blow-by-blow action of Tuesday night's fracas when the official pictures of the Ambers-Armstrong championship battle—all 15 rounds of it are shown at Sidney Lust's Cameo Theater, at Thirty-fourth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast, in Mount Rainier, Md., beginning at noon today. The film will be shown for one week in addition to the screen attractions regularly booked. A glimpse at these pictures may enable Washington to make up its own mind whether Henry fouled himself out of the decision or not.

The Roadside Theater is in trouble—not with its current "The Still Alarm," with one of the most remarkable third acts ever seen in the "old red barn," but in the matter of casting "The Drunkard," on the fire again for early performance.

It was taken for granted that Phyllis Warner would assume her original role of the little girl in the prohibition preachment, but, come to find out, Phyllis has grown up and the part hasn't. This leaves the Roadsiders a bit in the lurch. A girl of about 12, preferably a little on the smallish side, is wanted at once for the role Miss Warner has outgrown. Aspirants for this histrionic distinction should get in touch with Director Ralph Fowler, of the Roadside, which may be done by calling Wisconsin 7070. The quicker, the better.

Reverting, if we may, to Mr. Lust and his expansive enterprises, it will be of interest that the name of his Boro Theater, out Bethesda way, is about to be changed to the Bethesda Theater. The new name will be installed in the theater's large electric sign in brilliant neon lettering over the impending week-end. The Lust house in Bethesda, it seems, is rapidly becoming a center of community service and interest and Mr. Lust's thought is that the least he can do is advertise the name of the nearby municipality by using it in place of one that has practically no local significance.

Comes a cordial note from Elizabeth Guthridge, Edward Dargan and Banks Murray, jr., of the cast of the "Going Native" revue, now on the stage at Loew's Capitol for its final performances, the spirit of which is immensely appreciated. We are especially enthusiastic over the "enclosure," chosen with such uncanny prescience on the one hot day when wire trouble had put our fans out of commission. "The same to you."

In response to many requests from delighted patrons, the Mount Vernon open-air auto theater, has booked another group of Walt Disney's color cartoons for the last half of next week. This was inspired by the enthusiasm displayed over the recent 50 minutes of Disney's Academy Award winners. The new bookings all were released within the year and will be shown with the screen feature, "Dead End." Incidentally, Manager Irving Shapiro is so sure he is an A-No. 7 weather prophet that he already has scheduled a special holiday-week-end, midnight performance for Sunday night, September 3, when Deanna Durbin in "Three Smart Girls" will be the major feature.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 23.—What a town! If you don't conform in the usual way, heat is on. Orson Welles has been getting it; I think because he's got what everyone here wants — power. He, a newcomer, will do a picture as he chooses without kissing anyone's foot or saying "by your leave." And Charles Laughton is being called names because he won't let anyone watch him work. Now, I can't stand snooty actors. But how would you like to wear a false face that stretches one eye nearly out of its socket? As the "Hunchback" he wears a rubber armor on his body weighing 25 pounds. It completely covers his torso to below the waist, down to his wrists and with a hump running into back of his skull, backbone built into rubber, all tight as a straitjacket. Then he's tied to a stake, which revolves slowly in the broiling sun, while a crowd of extras jeer at him.

HOPPER

Curious that he'd come 6,000 miles to play a part like that. But he's putting all he's got into it. The other day, after being tortured, he crawled like an animal on all fours into the cathedral. Workmen, extras, everyone cheered for 2 minutes. He's not easy to work with, for he approaches each scene psychologically, gets into a frightful stew, then does it dramatically. But you must admit he gets results.

They had a light moment on the set when a bear, frothing at the mouth, ran loose through the crowds. Seems there was no need for worry, as he was just a trained bear with a penchant for sweets—and had been eating tutti-frutti ice cream.

The Gary Coopers, accompanied by Mrs. Cooper's mother, are basking under Bermuda skies. Seems Mamma can't leave them alone. Even went on their honeymoon. Loves reflected glory of Gary's popularity. Ain't love grand?

Garbo leaves for home and goes almost immediately to visit Eve Curie in Paris, to get more information about her mother before she plays "Madame Curie." Irene Dunne did the same thing three years ago, but never got the part.

Erroll Flynn will bring his sister back here to live with them.

It ought to be known that Ford Sterling, one-time organizer of the Keystone company, has been in the hospital for two years, had one leg amputated last week. And being completely broke, wouldn't have been able to hang on but for Jed Prouty (of Jones family fame) who has helped financially, and visits daily. Now that we know, come on fellows, do your stuff. He would.

Now that Bonita Granville's no longer at Warner's, Metro is planning big things for her. Tested her with upswept hair. Little Bonita is a big girl now.

Herman Shumlin, producer of "Little Foxes," is flying out to close the sale of the play to Sam Goldwyn. Willie Wyler will direct it. It's grim, but a wonderful play.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 23.—When Joel McCrea stepped out of the Samuel Goldwyn studios and tossed a salary of four figures into the discard, there were those who said that Joel was foolish. Yes, foolish like a fox, for he knew with Gary Cooper on the lot, he didn't have a chance in the important pictures. How right he was, was not only proved when he signed with Paramount soon after, but again today when Wesley Ruggles gave him the male lead in "Arizona," opposite Jean Arthur, one of the most sought-after roles of the year.

LOUELLA PARSONS

It took courage for Joel to take such a step, but as always, he had both feet on the ground and the whole thing figured out. Wesley Ruggles' "Arizona" will be of equal importance to Frank Capra's "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and is one of Columbia's most expensive productions. A whole city has been built near Tucson, where it will be filmed in technicolor.

Here's news I feel sure every studio will be interested to hear. The life of O. Henry (William Sidney Porter) will be written by Ralph Spence in collaboration with Mrs. Sara Colman Porter, the author's widow. Ralph says that O. Henry has more fans throughout the world than any two top film stars combined, and I don't doubt it, for his down-to-earth analysis of the masses made him one of the most popular short story writers who ever lived. Ralph is planning to go to North Carolina to confer with Mrs. Porter, herself a writer. Later they will visit Austin, Tex., where O. Henry worked as a druggist and also as a bank clerk. Hollywood will have a chance to meet Mrs. Porter, for she and Spence will do their scripting here.

Rather than have "The Real Glory" completely banned in the Philippines, Sam Goldwyn has agreed to remove all the scenes found objectionable—which is certainly a change of heart from his stand earlier in the week. All this afternoon, Sam and Jimmy Roosevelt sat in a projection room and went over the picture with a fine comb with J. M. Elizalde, resident commissioner of the islands. Take it from me—Sam hated to cut a single scene, but feeling was running so high, I believe he was wise to compromise. President Manuel Quezon was one of the hundreds who communicated with Goldwyn, begging him not to present the Philippine Islanders in an unfavorable light. September 12 is the preview date.

Hard to keep track of Errol Flynn, who flits from Southampton to "21" in New York, with cameras following. According to Maury Paul's column (Cholly Knickerbocker to you), he has been in company with Rene de Marco and others at the World's Fair, having himself some fun. He can do whatever he wants to until October 1, when Warners want him home for "The Sea Hawk." The cast is already being lined up, with Flora Robson engaged to play Queen Elizabeth. She is here now in "We Are Not Alone" and will stay on for Flynn's picture. Remember, she played Queen Elizabeth in "Fire Over England" and did a marvelous job.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Jane Wyman denies that she and Ronald Reagan have set the date; Bennie Bartlett, the child actor, had a narrow escape, when a bullet from a hunter's rifle went through the canteen he was carrying, while he and his dad were on a mountain trip; Nancy Kelly and Bert Parks, a radio announcer, were a Victor Hugo twosome; much hilarity at Slapsie Maxie's, when he previewed his Warner Brothers short. Binnie Barnes won bank night and was paid off in pennies. Jane Wyman drew a 1908 Cadillac painted a bright red. Maxie was so excited he forgot his lines in the floor show but Binnie prompted him; the Albertina Rasch ballet at the bowl brought out our music lovers and it was really beautiful. Eleanor Powell, Jeanette MacDonald, Gene Raymond, the Frank Capras were among those who expressed appreciation for Miss Rasch's able work.

Eddie Robinson, one of our Paris correspondents says, has two body guards, appointed by the French police; George E. Stone at the La Conga with cute Bee Brunner, who stands 4 feet 11 in her stocking feet; Wynn Rocamora, popular man about town, at the Troc with Gertie Niesen. The Alfred Sloanes—he is president of General Motors—were also there with a party; Norma Talmadge and Orry Kelly stepping out at the Lamaze. Norma is as slender these days as a debutante; Charles Laughton has shed 15 pounds while working on "The Hunchback of Notre Dame"; Don Ameche's baby is expected home from the hospital this week; That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Four New Films Will Mark New Theater Week

Outdoor and "Barn" Attractions Thrive As Summer Wanes

"FOUR FEATHERS." With the background of Kitchener's Sudan campaign, the A. E. W. Mason story comes to the Palace screen in an adaptation by R. C. Sheriff. Filmed to a large extent in Africa and entirely in Technicolor, the picture presents a cast headed by Ralph Richardson, C. Aubrey Smith, John Clements and June Duprez. The story concerns the resignation of one of the officers from Kitchener's staff just on the eve of trouble. Three of his fellow officers and his bride send him white feathers as a symbol of his cowardice, each of which the hero avenges. Opens this morning.

Earle

"GOLDEN BOY." Clifford Odets' much-discussed play comes to the screen with a trio of stars, two of whom are the noted Barbara Stanwyck and Adolphe Menjou and the third William Holden, a young, unknown actor, who steps into stardom in this important role. The story concerns a young violinist who puts aside his music when a ring career promises certain fortune and fame. Lee Cobb, Joseph Calleia, Edward Brophy and Sam Levene are in the supporting cast. On the stage, the featured performers will be Medley and Dupree, funsters; Helene Faye, violinist; Una Cooper, acrobatic dancer; Claire and the Sana Sisters and the 16 Earle Roxyettes. Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

"WHEN TOMORROW COMES." The Irene Dunne-Charles Boyer film remains for a second week on Fifteenth street. The story concerns the romance of a labor-conscious waitress and a world-famous pianist. The supporting cast includes Barbara O'Neil, Onslow Stevens, Nydia Westman and Fritz Feld. Also continuing is "Metropolis, 1936," the latest "March of Time."

Capitol

"WINTER CARNIVAL." Ann Sheridan has the leading role in this college picture, which has as its setting the annual mid-winter carnival at Dartmouth College. Miss Sheridan plays an heiress who is trying to "get away from it all" and winds up with a romance at the Dartmouth festivities. Richard Carlson, Robert Allen, Helen Parrish and Robert Armstrong are in the cast. Glen Miller and his Sunset Serenade Band are the headliners of the Capitol's incoming stage show. The popular orchestra leader heads with him his two regular vocalists, Marion Hutton and Bob Eberle. Ruthie Barnes, tap dancer; Ricky Lee, with "Tanglefoot" and Diana Lure, in "Ship-Ahoy," and Morgan and Randall are other variety acts on the Capitol bill. Opens tomorrow morning.

Metropolitan

"COAST GUARD." Randolph Scott, Frances Dee and Ralph Bellamy have the featured roles in this film, based on incidents in the history of the United States Coast Guard. Rescue at sea, flood patrol on a mighty river and activity in the annnula ice-break in the Arctic are some of the sequences in which Walter Connolly heads the supporting cast. Opens tomorrow morning.

Columbia

"HOTEL FOR WOMEN." Elsa Maxwell's first film returns for a second downtown engagement after a week at the Capitol. Some of the girls in this story of city life are Ann Sothern, Linda Darnell, Jean Rogers, Lynn Bari, June Gale and Joyce Compton. James Ellison, John Halliday, Alan Dinehart and Sidney Blackmer are the men.

Little

Olney

"REBOUND." With Mary Brian in the starring role, this Donald Ogden Stewart comedy makes its first local appearance, although first produced several seasons ago. The film star is supported by the resident Olney company, including William Bishop, Jeanette Chinley, Freddie Sherman, Mabel Paige and Frank McNeills. Lucia Lull continues through this Saturday evening in "Strictly Dishonorable," with matinees this afternon and Saturday at 2:45.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

By Lily Pons.

(Opera, screen and radio star and today's guest columnist for Leonard Lyons.)

I feel like Mrs. Roosevelt. I am writing a column on the train. I have been chewing on this pencil for 15 minutes now and wondering how to start, what to say. It's funny, but on second thought I don't feel like Mrs. Roosevelt at all. She always knows what to say and how to say it, too. I have just asked my husband, Andre Kostelanetz, to sharpen my pencil. He says it doesn't need sharpening.

"It is the other end you have been chewing on," he says.

Now I have "to think what to write." What shall I say here? I am so flattered that I have been asked to write down what I think. A column is supposed to be full of news, isn't it? It's supposed to answer questions people ask even before they ask them. Experienced journalists know how to write such columns full of questions and answers. If there was someone here now who would ask me things, I could answer them. But to be left like this! I am now thinking that a blank sheet of paper never looked so huge to me in all my life.

What would people like to hear from me? How about our concert tour? It was a wonderful tour Kosty and I made, for we appeared together. We were happy—like tourists. It is beautiful, this country. I kept looking at it out of the train window.

When we boarded the train that took us to Milwaukee, I could still hear the shouting and the applause that followed the concert the night before. Kosty and I together have said over and over again: "It's almost unbelievable, isn't it?" Unbelievable and wonderful. We heard after the concert that a 70-year-old woman came at dawn to take a place at the box-office! How I hope that I sang well enough to please her. How much she must care for music. I wish I could describe in golden words my feeling when I think about that woman. It's something like carrying a lighted candle into a dark room. See what I mean?

There was a question asked of me after a recent concert that I would like to answer again. A man who has a 14-year-old daughter came to my dressing room and wanted to know what training she should have.

"Miss Pons," he said, "she sings like a bird."

"And as happily?" I asked him. His face grew a little sober then. "No, honestly, I don't believe she cares to work very hard at it. She calls singing work."

"But it is," I told him. "Hard, grueling work, endless and everlasting. But don't force your daughter to sing if she doesn't want to. Enough that she has a good voice and that she brings joy to you when she sings for you. Offer her the opportunity to study. But if she rebels, don't force. Wait a year or so. But let her know always how happy it makes you to hear her sing, how happy it makes other people. She will begin to think about it, then. For she will realize that if through work she can make people happy she will turn to it. Everyone must work at something. And it is not given to everyone to make other people happy through that work."

Kosty and I saw the Grand Canyon for the first time! Now I am trying to remember what we said to each other as we stood side by side looking at the grandeur that is Nature at her most awe-inspiring. I can't remember. I think perhaps we said nothing at all. What was there to say? With music perhaps one night be able to describe the canyon. It has been done with music. Great authors have also done it with words. But my words are too small. I can only say "I loved it."

This tour of America was a trip through a dream. In Milwaukee, where I sang and Kosty conducted the orchestra, there were more than 50,000 people in Washington Park. Some of them had driven more than 200 miles to attend the concert. I sometimes wish I had twice the voice and twice my strength. I would like to sing for hours without ever getting tired.

Now that I've written a column, I hope that I have acquitted myself nobly. It takes me a long time to absorb the color and movement of things. With music I can express my emotions quickly. With words, no. But I can say at the end of this piece of writing that I enjoyed doing it and I do hope that the gentle reader has not been bored. You see I sing for a living. Au revoir!

FBI Fingerprint Files Growing Fast

The evolution of the fingerprinting trend can be traced in figures released by the Department of Justice yesterday. They show the number of criminal fingerprints received from police departments in cities of more than 100,000 population for the past 15 years.

Chicago, for instance, sent only two fingerprints in 1925, with its crop of criminal fingerprints soaring to 8,113 for 1932 and 4,912 for 1939. The 93 cities in the list sent in 201,011 in the 1939 fiscal year, compared with only 27,192 for 1925.

Diplomats Stay in Washington—But Not for the Social Life

Leaves Canceled for Some Embassy Staffs, Count Potocki and Aides Kept Busy Standing by Wireless for Bulletins

By Dudley Harmon

This is the first summer in years that foreign embassies and legations in Washington haven't been left in the hands of sweltering secretaries and attaches while the ambassadors and ministers vacation peacefully in their homelands. Not only are practically all the European envoys sticking to their desks, but many diplomats have had their leaves suddenly canceled.

Headed by Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, the galaxy of distinguished but worried diplomats now in Washington includes the French envoy, Count de Saint Quentin; Prince Colonna, Italian representative; the Rumanian Minister, Radu Irimescue, the Hungarian envoy, John Pelenyi; and the Belgian Ambassador, Count Robert van der Straten Ponthoz. While he is at the moment out of town for a few days, the Minister from Yugoslavia, Constantin Fotitch, is back from a vacation in Europe and has been haunting his chancery since his return. This time last year most of these distinguished gentlemen were vacationing abroad.

Polish Envoy Follows Radio

Not only is the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, in Washington at the moment, but he is hardly setting foot outside the embassy. He and his staff cling closely to their short wave radios following events anxiously day and night. The Counselor and Mme. Witold Wankowicz returned hastily from a vacation at the home of Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, in New Bedford, Mass., and the other members of the staff are all reunited in Washington.

The Capital sincerely hopes that the handsome stone embassy on Sixteenth street—right next door to the Italian—isn't going to suffer the fate which befell the Austrian Legation and the suite of rooms at the Mayflower which was the domain of Faik Konitza, Albania's Minister. The Czech and Spanish Legation and Embassy are of course occupied at the present, but the atmosphere at both could hardly be called gay any longer.

In a few weeks, the Polish Ambassador has changed from Washington's most dashing diplomat to its most harried. Press conferences and radio broadcasts, instead of horseback riding and dinners, are taking up most of Count Potocki's time. Ever since his arrival here several years ago, the diplomat has been one of the most popular in Washington and in constant demand at parties. He has done his share of entertaining at the embassy, during his regime the scene of countless dinners, receptions celebrating Polish holidays, and the first hunt ball ever given by an Ambassador to Washington.

The pleasant, sociable envoy has not only entertained a large cross-section of Americans in Washington, but also has been a generous host to several fortunates from the Capital who have visited him at Lancut, the fabulous Potocki estate near Krakow. Returned wide-eyed travelers have told almost incredible tales of its splendors, including the seven dining rooms, each decorated authentically in a different period. The hunting and stables of Lancut are famous. In the carriage house on the estate there are 120 equipages of all periods, all of them in perfect condition.

Handsome Murals Adorn Embassy

The Ambassador has carried out some interesting decorations at the embassy here since his arrival. One is the beautiful mural in the dining room recently completed by Prof. Jan de Rosen, distinguished Polish artist. It depicts King John III, who won great battles against the Turks, astride a white charger, and in the background there is Pilsudski's figure on horseback. Prof. Rosen explains that the mural is supposed to depict the meeting of two epochs.

Unless the worst happens, the embassy staff is now expecting the arrival of two new staff members. They are Count Antony Tarnowski, who has been serving in Amsterdam, and Count Lasocki, whose wife is the daughter of a former Polish Ambassador to France. Count Tarnowski is a bachelor.

Elizabeth Walson Wed to Lieut. Bixby

Walter Reed Hospital Chapel Banked With Asters and Gladioli as Bride Is Given Away by Col. Walson

The Memorial Chapel of Walter Reed Hospital was the scene of an impressive ceremony yesterday when Miss Elizabeth Walson, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Charles Moore Walson, of 3020 Tilden street, was married to Lieut. George Willard Bixby, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Frank Bixby, of 4331 Harrison street.

Chaplain Col. A. C. Oliver performed the ceremony, which took place at 8 o'clock last evening. The chapel was banked with white asters and pink gladioli, and ferns were massed about the altar.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white chiffon over slipper satin. A long chiffon train, edged with satin, fell from the waist, and her tulle veil was held with a double veil at the top edged with heirloom rose point lace which belonged to her great grandmother. She carried white gladioli and bordonia.

Her maid of honor was Miss Helen Jennette Wallace, who wore a costume of apple green chiffon over green satin. Two darker green velvet bows trimmed the waist, and she carried a cluster of pink gladioli with red centers.

Richard Maurer Is Best Man

Richard Maurer, of Philadelphia, was best man, and the ushers were Lieut. Rollie N. Blancett, Lieut. Charles B. Schweizer, Lieut. Eugene J. Stann, Lieut. Frank W. Govern, Lieut. William C. Hill and Lieut. John Davenport.

A reception at the Army and Navy Country Club roof followed the ceremony. Mrs. Walson wore a gown of cream colored lace appliqued in cinnamon colored Alencon and a lace and brown net hat to match. Mrs. Bixby, mother of the bridegroom, had chosen blue lace over satin and a hat of the same shade.

Couple Leaves On Trip to Miami

When they left for a wedding trip to Miami, the bride wore a smart black-ribbed suit with contrasting accessories. The couple will reside at Fort Belvoir, Va., on their return.

Out-of-town guests included Mrs. Minnie W. Miller, of Salt Lake City, grandmother of the bride; Miss Virginia Letts, of Detroit, and Mr. and Mrs. L. J. O'Shea, of Scarsdale, N. Y.

The bride attended Penn Hall and Lieut. Bixby was graduated from West Point after studying for two years at the University of Maryland.

Mrs. Cowing Gives A Housewarming For Her Daughter

Mrs. Amy Gronna Cowing held a housewarming last night at her new home, 3800 Fulton street, for her daughter, Miss Alice Marie Cowing, but wisely gave the party before any of the furniture had been moved in. Thus the young people could dance and make merry until a late hour without fear of doing any damage.

Among the guests were several Annapolis midshipmen and West Point cadets. There were about 50 present altogether. The party was somewhat in the nature of a farewell to Miss Cowing, as she will leave the end of next month for her final year at National Park Seminary.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Herbert, jr., who share the house with Mrs. Cowing, will entertain tonight at a similar party for their son, Lynn Gronna Herbert. Mrs. Herbert is Mrs. Cowing's sister.

Among the young ladies present last evening were the Misses Margaret Swartzell, Julie Morse, Barbara Henning, Gail Koff, Virginia Wayne, Myrna Macklin, Frances Clark, Betty Parsons, Betty Winkelman, Miriam and Ruth Darby and Peggy Plumber.

Also present were Cadet Robert Clark, Joseph Ives, Frank and Woodward Hoover and Midshipman Victor Maulvin.

The ceremony took place Monday morning at 11 o'clock with the Rev. T. C. Shaffer officiating.

She attended Shepherd State Teachers' College at Shepherdstown, W. Va., and is a graduate of West Virginia University, where she was a member of Eta Sigma Phi honorary sorority.

The ceremony will take place in St. James Episcopal Church, Warrenton. Miss Keith has selected Mrs. Harrison Colkert, of Ardmore, Pa., formerly of Warrenton, and Mrs. Hugh Reed, of Plainfield, as her matrons of honor. Bridesmaids will be Mrs. Alan L. Day, Mrs. Melville Barnes, jr., Miss Dorothy Vernon Montgomery, Miss Virginia Howard Bowman, Miss Virginia Randolph, and Miss Sally Appleton.

Miss Keith is being extensively entertained in Warrenton and northern Virginia and was guest of honor at a number of entertainments during the past week, when she was in Plainfield, N. J., visiting her fiance's family.

Your Figure Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

New York, Aug. 23.

IF YOUR exercise program is about to do a late summer fade-out, take a tip from Jane Froman, lovely radio and screen singer, and vary it. Try something different every day to wake up your interest in spite of an inclination to let it go until fall.

Ordinarily, weather permitting, Miss Froman can rely on golf, tennis, riding, swimming and bowling to keep her figure perfect. Now she's down to swimming and not so much of that as she'd like . . . so what does she do? She stands out on her terrace and swings her golf club for exercise. Try it yourself: Ten swings to the right, rest, then ten swings to the left.

Chin Yourself

Instead of tennis, she has ping-pong! It is not strenuous at all, and a good game is really quite a lot of fun. She also likes to skip rope . . . and that is something that every one of you could take up. A fairly heavy rope . . . made for adults, not children . . . is best. Skip backwards, swinging the arms from the shoulderers to strengthen the pectorals and firm the backs of the upper arms. Begin with 25 times, then work up to 150 . . . but take it slowly!

You probably haven't chained yourself for years. Miss Froman finds it a fine eye-opener for a sultry morning. She uses the bar of an outdoor awning and pulls herself up, chinlevel with the bar. You may have to use a doorway, or, if you have one, a stretching bar. Don't fail to get your money's worth out of your bar! You can keep a streamlined midsection simply by using the bar every time you go through that particular doorway.

An old card trick furnishes her with a waistline exercise: The cards are scattered on the floor, the knees are kept perfectly straight while she bends down and picks up the cards at the far side of each foot. When you try it, be sure to first pull up with those lower abdominal muscles, and then do your bending to the extreme side.

Keep It Going

None of those suggestions is strenuous and they may add just the bit of variety your program needs. The main thing is to keep it going, for when you stop your exercises, it's terrifically hard to start them again. Besides, your figure can change for the worse in one short week of no exercise!

Hollywood Shirtwaist Style

A new version of the eternal shirtwaist frock is worn by the radiant Hedy Lamarr. It was especially created for her forthcoming role in "New York Cinderella." Her screen designer imparted a novel look to the shirt and shirt theme by making a blouse of frosty white crepe built on loose, easy lines. The collar is a prim stand-up border, the pockets are patch ones and the squared shoulders end in soft voluminous sleeves. A practical lesson in home designing can be drawn from this picture since local Cinderellas may bridge this summer-into-fall season by combining an interesting blouse skirt for piquancy in their wardrobes

Batter Bread, Country Sausage, Says Marcy L. Sperry

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

WHEN A BUSY executive calmly and pleasantly listens to a persistent reporter inquiring about his favorite food you know why he is a successful business administrator. Marcy L. Sperry, president, Washington Gas Light Co., has had a life crowded with interesting activity, but it hasn't crowded out his very definite ideas of how certain foods should be cooked. Here is a man who knows what goes into a dish and why it should be included.

Mr. Sperry

Born in Maryland and living in the South part of his life, his food tastes are Dixie influenced. Mr. Sperry thinks Batter Bread is one of the most delicious of foods when properly made. He wants it made from cornmeal, without the addition of any other flour. Not only does he want the corn predominant, but he says if it is properly made it will be rich with eggs, butter and milk. The creation that Mr. Sperry thinks so delicious is soft spoon bread, of custard consistency on top and cornbread basis. If you follow Mr. Sperry's recipe you will know that he is right about an excellent breadstuff.

Batter Bread

Cook ¼ cup cornmeal and about 2 cups of milk together in a double boiler until mixture thickens. It will take about 5 minute. Add 1 teaspoon butter, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 teaspoon salt and 2 egg yolks which have been beaten separately. Fold in 2 stiffly beaten egg whites last. Beat for 2 minutes. Pour into a greased baking dish and bake in a moderate oven for 30 minutes.

Mr. Sperry thinks that highly seasoned country sausage made from the tenderloin and cooked in cakes along with some bacon is the food to eat with batter bread.

Besides directing the Gas Light Co., Mr. Sperry is very active in Washigton's civic affairs. A vestryman in St. John's Church, a director of the Board of Trade and a past chairman of the Red Cross roll call, he still has time to play a driving game of tennis on the hottest of days and give a recipe for his favorite food.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, Aug. 23.

THE AUCTION habit must be something like the hives. Get it and itch until you have bought a three-legged chair for 19 cents. I'm not a sufferer myself, but my photographer pal, Marion Stephenson, has a terrible case of it and is furnishing her farm at Upper Stepney, Conn., while under the influence. The other day I went with her on one of those habit-forming junkets.

We drove nigh onto 30 miles from her house, through the fine old towns of Bethel, Danbury and Ridgefield, and finally anchored at a dismal old farmhouse on Conn. 33. A goodly crowd was there, with chronic auction hounds in the majority, but also a lot of city slickers in fancy slacks, including one petulant lady with an evil-looking Peke. There must have been 150 ladies sittting on the lawn or wandering about the merchandise, which a sleek young spellbinder was trying to move from the front porch.

"Here's a real old what-not," he crooned. You know what they bring? I didn't, but that one brought $3.50. "And now here's a real old Hitchcock Rocker," but he started the bidding so high that nobody went for it. It looked like any old rocker to me, but I'm not up on the fine points of this racket.

"Here's a basket AND contents. Do I hear 75 cents?" He did. He even got $3 for a colored glass paper-weight, good for heaving purposes, and a "fine old shoemaker's bench" actually fetched $3.50. There was a busted spinning wheel on the premises, and other rubbish that I wouldn't give house room—but it must have charms.

I suspected that a lot of the junk wasn't part of the contents of that old house, but played a regular auction circuit, and I found this was true. Even Marion was unmoved by the stuff on display, so we had a bottle of pop all around and went back to the old home at Upper Stepney, where we could take off our shoes and relax. I'm glad I was never bitten by an auction!

Barbara Bannister, the pretty blonde heiress of the Smithfield Ham interests, is in the papers a lot here . . . Lately she reported the loss of a 20-caret square-cut diamond she says is worth $55,000. She offered a $5,000 reward. Beauteous Barbara couldn't be opening in a night club, of course.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Heroines of the Battle of Dog Days

(The following women have been awarded medals by this column for distinguished service during the present siege of the city by the forces of General Humidity.)

MRS. A.—She never bemoaned her fate of having to stay in town during August, or pointed out that "everybody else" had "gone somewhere," or insisted that people just weren't supposed to live in such a climate and that anyway she had always been allergic to heat.

MRS. B.—She did not go around wearing a grim smirk in an effort to make the best of things, nor determinedly try to change the subject when somebody else complained, but freely admitted that the situation was pretty bad—and then shut up on the matter.

MISS C.—She dragged herself out of bed mornings to do her hip and waistline exercises even when she felt that she had no more spine than an angle worm. She never gave up her daily walk, nor slumped in her chair, nor ambled listlessly along the street, nor listened to the tempter who whispered, "What you really need now is rest, and you can catch up on everything else when the cool days come."

MRS. D.—She did not give up on her hair and decide there was no use trying to do anything with it, but kept her sagging permanent as neat as possible, made no apology for it, and never made it the subject of an evening's conversation.

MRS. E.—Though possessed of a fetching figure, she did not make the heat an excuse for donning a swim or play suit around the house, or for performing her suburban errands in shorts or slacks. She did not appear on the streets in bare legs and high-heeled shoes, nor did she pose in a bathing suit at the handle of a lawn mower in her front yard at the time her men neighbors were returning from work.

MISS F.—She accepted philosophically the fact that her office was the "hottest spot in town;" she did not engage in a single row over the location of the electric fan; she did not once let her nerves get the better of her when the telephone rang once too often; and she never even in the privacy of her own thoughts, yielded to self pity over her wage-earning-in-humidity plight.

MRS. G.—She wore her end-of-the-season clothes with as much aplomb as if they were Easter outfits; when down town in her white shoes and faded linens, she did not dodge fashionable friends in black jersey and suede; she never set out with a careless toilette thinking she couldn't look like anything in her clothes anyway and that there wasn't much chance of seeing anybody this time of the year.

MRS. H.—She never complained about how dead the town was and that there was nothing to do. What is more, she was content to sit at home and rock, without promoting picnics, bridge games, or evening spelling bees, charades and intelligence tests for friends who had hoped for a quiet summer.

MISS J.—She recognized the fact that guests spoil overnight and are poison on Sunday afternoons when the temperature goes above 90 degrees, and she stayed where everybody else ought to stay in extreme hot weather—at home.

MRS. K.—An occupant of an apartment she kept her windows up—but her radio tuned DOWN.

MRS. L.—Despite perspiration, sleeplessness and wobbly knees, she was still able to find momentary delight in the closely hanging dark blue velvet skies of summer nights; in the pungent whiffs of weeds and late summer grass in Rock Creek Park; in the delicate pinks of gladioli, the flame of cannas and the concentrated sunshine of marigolds in yards and flower carts; in the gallant fluttering of poplar leaves on torrid afternoons; in the crunch of the first brown leaves on the sidewalks; in the occasional faint and fleeting breath of September that came on the trail of an August breeze, with its comforting promise, "This too will pass."

How Invest $500 in Art Education for Gifted Boy, So As to Guarantee Maximum Benefits

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Although your column adorns the Woman's Page of The Post, it is not surprising that so many men are constant readers. Your wholesome discussions and counsel on every day problems is valuable material indeed for meditation. I have compiled a scrapbook containing many of your articles, together with excerpts from other sources.

A problem now confronts me. I have a younger brother who is much interested in art and he shows marked talent. Like so many others today, he has lacked the necessary funds to pursue his training along congenial lines. However, he will soon be 21 years of age, and may claim an inheritance of $500. We shall appreciate your counsel as to the wisest and sanest course he could adopt, leading to maximum benefits from its expenditure.

I have noticed how wisely you counsel Divine Guidance at times, in seeking the right course. But this lad seems to have no tendency to invoke such leadership and appears quite despondent, occasionally, in his endeavors to surmount barriers to success. He is a good, wholesome boy and should make headway if encouraged along the right pathway. With your able suggestions to guide him, we shall feel confident of his success. Very truly yours, MAN READER.

Source of Information

DEAR MAN READER: For a number of years, the Civic Education Service, located at 744 Jackson place northwest (telephone National 3200), has been gathering the latest and most reliable information available on employment opportunities, wages and working conditions in the various occupational fields. It has drawn upon the findings of surveys and investigations made by government and private agencies. Young persons who are trying to decide upon—or to prepare themselves for—a career, can obtain sound and authoritative counsel from the Civic Education Service. And it is to this service that I urge your brother to take his particular problem.

Here his situation and his ambitions will meet with the most sympathetic and helpful interest. To illustrate: Immediately after receiving your letter, I questioned a representative of the Civic Education service concerning the most advisable course for your brother. The reaction was instantaneous and to the point. It took the form of counter-questions.

Is he interested in the fine arts or in commercial art? What evidence exists to indicate that he possesses "marked talent?" Will he be free to expend his entire inheritance of $500 on special education, or must it be divided between living costs and costs of education? How many years is he prepared to devote to his art training? And so on.

The artist, I was told, has a choice of two fields in which to work: the fine arts and commercial art. Students invading the field of fine arts, such as painting and sculpture, have severely restricted opportunities. At best, they make an insecure living. More frequently, they have a desperate time to find work at all.

But far more encouragement can be given to those who plan to enter the field of commercial art. Here, opportunities are rapidly expanding. Department stores engage whole staffs of artists to make attractive advertising displays of their goods. Newspapers employ artists both for their advertising and for their editorial departments. Magazines need talented artists, with an aptitude for vivid illustration of articles and stories.

My informant continued to say that one who hopes to make a career in the field of commercial art should, obviously, possess some natural ability. But he does not need to have as much originality and natural talent as he would need to achieve success in the field of fine arts. If he has any knack for drawing at all, he can, with proper training and application, develop the technical skill required of the commercial artist.

(This same information, by the way, is set forth—in almost identical words—in "The Promise of Tomorrow," a volume on vocational guidance which should, in my opinion, be studied by every high school boy and girl in America, and by their parents as well. It was written by Walter E. Myer, director of the Civic Education Service, in collaboration with Clay Coss, associate editor of the service's several publications, and appeared on the bookstands early this year.)

It was suggested that your brother contact the Civic Education Service at his convenience, bringing samples of his work. Information will be placed at his disposal which should aid him in making a suitable vocational choice; and which should be of further assistance to him in charting a course of study or training designed to yield maximum return on his investment of time, money and effort. What more could he ask?

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Learn Gay Cowboy Songs

GREAT FUN to lasso the gang for a song-fest of Western melodies! How you "whoop it up" as you sing about such a bold bad hombre as Jessie James:

"Poor Jessie had a wife to mourn for his life,
Three children, they were brave,
But that dirty little coward
That shot Mister Howard,
Has laid poor Jesse in his grave."

On parties and dates you keep the fun poppin' if you have a songbooks along, start the crowd picking favorites. Who doesn't like the cowboy love-song, "I Want to be a Cowboy's Sweetheart." Here's part of the chorus:

"I want to hear the coyotes howling
As the sun sinks in the west,
I want to be a Cowboy's Sweetheart,
That's the life I love best."

How you chuckle when you join the gang in "Dangerous Nan McGrew"—she's a fit pal for Jesse:

"I eat nails for my breakfast,
My coffee is TNT,
I bite off a hunk of dynamite chunk,
Why that's peaches and cream to me."

And the "Little Old Shanty"—how feelingly you sing it:

"Oh, the angel, how I'd bless her if this place her home she'd make,
In the Little Old Sod Shanty On My Claim."

Everyone loves such favorites, songs old and new, like "Git Along Little Dogies," "Bury Me Not on the Lone Prairie," "Will There be a Rodeo in Heaven?"

These songs — many others — you find complete in our 50-page songbook, "Western Heart Throbs." Has 27 crackerjack numbers—tender ballads of the plains, rollicking cowboy ditties with words, music, piano accompaniment guitar diagrams.

Send 15c in coins for our songbook, "Western Heart Throbs," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of book.

Watergate Symphony Season Ends

12,000 Cheer Kindler As He Directs After Absence of 5 Weeks; Guest Artist Pleases

By John Chabot Smith

The last musical note of the season floated across the Potomac from the Watergate last night as approximately 12,000 music lovers welcomed the National Symphony Orchestra's own conductor back to Washington.

Two speeches by Dr. Hans Kindler and the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" closed last night's concert after it had been turned into a demonstration of affection by the audience.

The orchestra management revealed that all but a few of the 9,000 seats had been sold, and estimated at 3,000 the number of free listeners who jammed the top steps and lined the bridge and causeway.

Sharing in the audience's enthusiastic applause was Miss Lura Stover, a young soprano from Pittsburg, who made her first Washington appearance last night singing "Adieu, Forets," from "Jeanne D'Arc," by Tchaikowsky.

Cheers Greet Dr. Kindler

By the cheers that greeted Dr. Kindler as he stepped jauntily on to the platform for his first concert here in five weeks the Watergate audience showed he is still their favorite conductor.

With a friendly wave of his baton to the crowd, Dr. Kindler took possession of the barge, casting a long look round to every corner as though to reassure himself his musical home had not changed in his absence.

His first selection, Mozart's overture to "The Impresario," seemed to reinforce the glad homecoming spirit, with the cheerful familiarity of its classical shapes and colors.

With a final satisfied swing of his baton at the end of the overture, Dr. Kindler turned slowly round, beaming, listening appraisingly to the applause of the audience as though to see if his hand had lost his skill. Then as the clapping grew louder he bowed deeper, and stretched out first one arm then the other to give the orchestra its due.

After the intermission came "Romeo and Juliet," by Tcahikowski. Again Dr. Kindler seemed to listen appraisingly to the applause, bowing first slightly, then deeper, and at last raising the orchestra before dashing off the stage.

Miss Stover, shyly hidden behind the microphone, delighted the audience with "Adieu, Forets," said with a different sorrow that told of courage. For an encore she offered an aria from Wagner's opera, "Tannahuser."

After two unfamiliar waltzes by Johann Strauss, "Paroxysms" and "Where the Citrons Bloom," Kindler played the "First Rumanian Rhapsody," by Enesco, an excited burlesque of drunken merriment.

Three Encores Demanded

The audience's hands were sore but tireless when Dr. Kindler finally gave up bowing and stepped back to the podium for a speech of thanks. "It is wonderful," he began, and thanked the audience, the musicians, the orchestra staff, and the National Capital Parks staff. And because they "all had stiff necks from watching the sky to see if it would rain," he played as his first encore "Thunder and Lightning," by Richard Strauss.

Two more encores followed, Schubert's "Moment Musicale," and the "Sailor's Dance," by Gliere. And in the end Dr. Kindler made another speech: "Let's hope that we'll be here again next summer as we all are now; let us hope that we will grow spiritually and in every way, and develop in the way we have started; and in that hope let us ask you to sing with us, the 'Star-Spangled Banner.'"

When the last notes of the anthem had drifted away into the darkness, the great audience broke up, slowly, reluctantly leaving, while a line of Dr. Kindler's friends crowded the little bridge to the stage entrance and stretched along the shore.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Hans Kindler regaled his welcoming auditors with a thoroughly enjoyable program which opened with the overture to one of Mozart's minor commissions, "Der Schauspieldirektor." Gottlieb Stephanie was the author of this one-act comedy with four characters, and for its performance in the Orangery at Schoenbrunn early in 1786 Kaiser Joseph II "commanded" Mozart to write some incidental music.

After this introduction came Dvorak's E minor symphony, usually designated his fifth, but actually the ninth. The prolonged controversy as to whether or not some of the themes were taken from Negro and Indian sources should have been settled long ago by the composer's statement in a letter to Oskar Nedbal: "That is a lie. I tried to write only in the spirit of those national American melodies."

Chaikovski's overture-fantasia, "Romeo and Juliet," began the second half of the concert and was followed by a familiar aria from the same composer's "Orleanskaya Deva." Lura Stover, a diminutive and dynamic young American soprano, intoned Jeanne d'Arc's farewell to her native woodland, and for an encore sang "Dich, theure Halle" from "Tannhaeuser." Her voice has both power and wide range, and her use of it reveals abundance of temperamental fire.

From the Paul Lowenberg collection of Viennese dance music acquired by the Library of Congress about a year ago, Dr. Kindler selected two waltzes by Johann Strauss the Younger which are practically unknown in the United States. One of them, "Paroxysmen," was recently conducted by Howard Barlow in a broadcast concert, but "Wo die Citronen blueh'n" went on the air for the first time last night.

Catholics Told Of 'Stone Age' Still Existing

Missionary Comes To Convention Here From New Guinea

Time was turned back 10,000 years by the Rev. William A. Ross, S. V. D., in a talk before veteran members of the Catholic Students Mission Crusade at Catholic University yesterday.

Father Ross came to the convention from the hinterland of New Guinea, where since 1933 he has been preaching the gospel to men of Stone Age culture. Three large tribes, who never had seen a white man and still lived in a world of polished stone axes and bone-tipped spears, were discovered by gold seekers in that year, he explained, and missionaries followed.

Father Ross spoke at one of many panel meetings held yesterday by the 2,000 student and veteran delegates to the convention

Resolutions on vocations and mission aid were adopted at last night's session. The mission aid resolution pointed out that the financing of mission enterprises is "especially difficult today," because of "the troubled situation in Europe, the Orient and our own economic status."

The convention recommended to the Crusaders greater support of Catholic University of Peking and a group of activities designed to increase mission vocations.

The Right Rev. Mgr. Thomas J. McDonnell, national director of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, told the crusaders that, "as the missionaries of tomorrow," they must carry "the shadow of the cross" to "every corner of the globe."

Martin Good Rider, the 13-year-old Indian boy who co-starred with Shirley Temple in "Suzanne of the Mounties," later asked the crusaders to "say a little prayer each day for the priests and sisters who are teaching my people how to know and love Christ better, that God will bless their work."

Earlier in the day the Most Rev. Eugene J. McGuiness, D. D., Bishop of Raleigh, N. C., preached a sermon on home missions at a pontifical mass in the university stadium.

The Most Rev. Francis J. L. Beckman, D. D., Archbishop of Dubuque, celebrated the mass, while the Rev. John J. Boardman, of Brooklyn, N. Y., officiated as archpriest. The Rev. F. A. Kaiser and the Rev. Vincent F. McCarthy were deacons of honor. Music was by the choir of the Marist College.

The Most Rev. Francis J. Spellman, D. D., Archbishop of New York, and president of the union, appeared at Catholic University yesterday for the first time since his consecration three months ago. New and old friends among the clergy pressed around him after the meeting to kiss the ring and receive his blessing.

A message from Pope Pius XII bestowing his apostolic blessing on the delegates and other messages from the apostolic delegate, the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani and Father Paul Manna, international secretary and founder of the union, were read by Mgr. McDonnell. The Right Rev. Mgr. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of the university, and the Rev. James M. Gillis, C. S. P., also spoke at the meeting.

Father Ross, barely 5 feet tall, with a long gray beard, told at the panel meeting a story of long efforts against odds. From the 200,000 natives in the mountain-locked valley in New Guinea, he gained 39 converts after four years of hard work, he said.

Lovenbein Thwarts Eviction By Paying $2,400 in Back Rent

Samuel Lovenbein yesterday thwarted eviction from his huge parking lot at John Marshall place and C street by countering a Municipal Court ejection writ with a certified check for $2,400. He called the eviction effort "a mean little trick" of the District Commissioners.

The $2,400 was Lovenbein's rent for June and July, which he had refused to pay because he claimed the District, which owns the land, charged him more than a fair rental in the last two years.

Lovenbein's lease expired July 31, but he refused to move to make way for the Grand Plaza Parking Area, Inc., which bid $2,256 a month for the land, over Lovenbein's bid of 1,450 a month. Lovenbein claimed the District Commissioners had no right to lease the land by taking bids. He said he was entitled to remain because the $1,200 a month he had been paying to them was too high, and because he had spent several thousand dollars developing the area.

Justice Goldsborough refused Lovenbein an injunction to protect him from eviction. H. L. Rust & Co., agents for the District, then sued for possession of the lot, because of the unpaid rent, and won.

Deputy marshals were due to serve the writ yesterday morning, but put off their visit until afternoon. During the day, Lovenbein assured his customers that in no case would he vacate. When Deputy United States R. L. DeRuiz and a squad of his men appeared in the afternoon Lovenbein read the eviction order and returned it with the certified check.

DeRuiz consulted Attorney Fred Doyle, representing the Rust company, and replied, "All right. If you will pay $2.85 in court costs, that will be all." Lovenbein paid him in silver.

District Heads To Study WPA Liaison Plea

Commissioners Will Consider Appointing 'Co-ordinator' Today

Appointment of a District "co-ordinator" to represent the local government in scheduling Works Progress Administration relief programs will be considered today by the Commissioners.

Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, jr., declared he was in favor of the plan, which was submitted by George Parker, acting District WPA administrator, as "administrative means of getting a little better co-ordination between the District and WPA.

The "co-ordinator" would represent the Commissioners on all WPA matters and recommend WPA projects for their consideration. Hitherto it has been the practice of the Commissioners to pass on all WPA projects personally.

Parker said a District representative was needed to work with WPA officials in "scheduling" projects and to act as a liaison officer so that "we'll all know where we're going."

Street Lights Dark Boy Cyclists Injured

Richard Carter, 13, and his brother, Lloyd, 9, suffered leg and arm injuries yesterday when the bicycle upon which they were riding was struck by an automobile in the 100 block of E street southwest.

Police said a short circuit darkened the street lights in the neighborhood shortly before the accident. The two boys, who live at 40 Ivy street southeast, were treated at Providence Hospital and sent home.

Abbot Predicts Weather Forecasts Weeks in Advance

Admitting that he is considered a "heretic" by some weather officials, Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, yesterday told the Lions Club that seven more stations for measuring solar radiation regularly would furnish information for predicing main features of the weather two weeks in advance.

Dr. Abbot ventured long range predictions based on his theory that weather tends to repeat itself in a master cycle of 23 years, and even more pronouncedly in 46 and 92 years. He declared the Northwest would not have another drought as big as the last one until the next century.

Dr. Abbot pointed out that the rainfall in Washington last Friday and Sunday tallied wtih his prediction that those days would likely bring heaviest rainfall each week in August.

$5,410,939 More Asked For Schools

$18,775,197 Needed, Ballou Estimates; Land Acquisition Policy Is Urged

Urging the Board of Education to adopt a definite policy on land acquisition for future school expansion, Supt. Frank W. Ballou yesterday sent to the Commissioners a request for $18,775,197 to meet the public school needs during 1941.

The actual budget estimate, preaced by a report from Ballou, represents an increase of $5,410,939 over the present appropriation.

In his report, Ballou reminded the school board of the urgent necessity for more land than has heretofore been approved, as well as the formulation of a policy for land acquisition, to the end that the board may have land ready for school buildings when needed.

"The annual estimates prepared by the Board of Education for the past several years have carried land items to meet this situation," he said, "but they have met disapproval en route from the board to the President."

The new estimates include 29 building projects and 31 purchases of land as sites for future building operations, or for additions to the present building system. Funds are requested for 370 additional school employes, including 170 teachers and librarians in the regular classes; 18 in administrative and supervisory positions; 98 in vocational, night school and Americanization classes; 35 clerks and some 45 persons to care for buildings and grounds.

The Board of Education recommended pay increases for 1,060 employes at a cost of $115,028. Due to the transfer this year of the Community Center Department to the Recreation Board and the merger of all recreational facilities, the schools did not include estimates for this agency for 1941.

For the new Calvin Coolidge High School the board has asked for funds to employ a new senior high school principal. For vocational guidance work, 15 assistant principals and 2 heads of departments, one for the colored and one for the white schools, were asked.

The budget estimates also include a recommendation from the board for elimination of a legislative provision that the average of salaries paid librarians in the public schools shall not exceed the average salaries paid employes performing the same type of work in the Free Public Library.

Englishman Pushes Mark Over 6 Miles Per Minute

New Feat Surpasses Previous Record By Eleven M. P. H.; Seeks Other Marks

By the Associated Press

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, Aug. 23.—John Cobb, quiet British businessman, boosted the world's automobile speed record above 6 miles a minute today.

He set a new mark of 368.85 miles per hour for the measured mile and 369.74 for the kilometer.

In two beautiful, whistling runs along a 13-mile straightaway and through mechanical timing traps in mid-course, Cobb pushed his 2,600 horsepower "Railton Red Lion" to speeds never before equaled on wheels. Hitherto they had been approached only by Capt. George E. T. Eyston, also an Englishman. Eyston's old record for the mile was 357.5 m. p. h. and for the kilometer, 357.34.

Conditions Reversed

Headed North Cobb's rate for the kilometer was 367.92, slower than for the mile because the measured kilometer lies at the south end of the track's center section and is reached before the driver can push his machine to maximum velocity.

On the return, situation was reversed.

The kilometer speed shot up to 371.56 while the mile dropped to 366.97.

Times in seconds for Cobb's record-shattering runs were:

Northbound-mile, 9.71; kilometer, 6.08; southbound-mile, 9.81; kilometer, 6.02; averages—mile, 9.76; kilometer, 6.05.

Seeks 4 Other Marks

"Let me digest this one first," Cobb said when asked if he contemplated further assaults on the land speed record.

Before leaving the salt flats for England, however, the sportsman will try to set four other speed marks, three now by Eyston and the other by a German, the late August Rosemeyer. They are for 5 and 10 miles and for 5 and 10 kilometers. The attempt will not be made before Friday, Cobb said.

Cobb admitted traveling at 6 miles a minute is not a diversion he would care to indulge in every day.

"It's not particularly frightening," he declared. "But there's always the uncertainty, when you start out, about whether or not you are going to reach the other end.

"And I can assure you it is certainly a relief when you do reach that other end and pull up to a safe stop."

Lack of Wind Wrecks Record Try

Berlin, Aug. 23 (AP).—Lack of wind deprived Milton G. Wegeforth, of San Diego, Calif., of what appeared to be certain victory in today's series of star boat races in Kiel harbor for the 1939 championship.

The race was declared no contest because Wegeforth, although well in the lead, failed to complete the 10 sea miles of the course within the time limit of three and a half hours.

When the cancellation was announced the Italian competitor, Straulino, was in second place, and G. Stanley Ogilvi, United States, third.

Marion Brown Loses on 23d To Miss Orcutt

Victor Then Wins Over Mrs. Page In Women's Tourney

By the Associated Press

Darien, Conn., Aug. 23.—Elizabeth Hicks, 5-foot California miss who has been playing golf for little more than two years, and Charlotte Glutting and Maureen Orcutt, two strapping New Jersey girls who have been top-flighters for several seasons, stole the show today in the forty-third United States women's golf championship.

Among them they put the three prime favorites on the ropes and thereby boosted themselves into the quarter-finals that will be played at the Wee Burn Club tomorrow afternoon.

Miss Hicks matched husky Fay Crocker, of Uruguay, yard for yard off the tees, and beat her on the twentieth hole, 1 up. Miss Glutting came on to turn back Pam Barton, the British champion, 1 up, with a birdie on the first extra hole. Miss Orcutt kept on the pressure all the way, to defeat the 1937 champion, Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, of Greensboro, N. C., 3 and 2.

Miss Crocker Rallies

Miss Hicks' victory was the four-star special, for this was only her second national championship, and a year ago she didn't even qualify for match play. After whipping Mrs. William Hockenjos, former Metropolitan titleholder, she played the first nine against Miss Crocker in even fours, to be 4 up going to the tenth. Right there Miss Crocker put on a rally which just fell short. All square with Miss Hicks playing the eighteenth, she missed an 8-foot putt for a win, and after they halved the nineteenth in birdie fours, lost the match on the twentieth when she drove into the rough and was partially stymied by a tree and a telephone pole.

Miss Orcutt, who had to go 23 holes in the morning to beat Marion Brown, of Washington, D. C., didn't let matters get out of hand that badly against Mrs. Page. She built up a 2-up margin with an outgoing 39, only 2 over par and, with a 4-4-2-4 finish, 2 under par, won on the sixteenth green.

Miss Orcutt pulled her morning match out of the fire with Miss Brown, the Middle Atlantic champion from the Manor Club, after trailing by two holes with three to play. Her victory on the twenty-third hole was the longest match of the tournament.

Marion Loses Lead

Miss Brown encountered water on the sixteenth and missed the green with her second shot to lose her lead on the seventeenth. She rallied with a great approach shot on the eighteenth, after four bad shots, to send the match into extra holes with a halve in bogey sixes. They both missed a chance to win the match before the twenty-third, and both made good putts to keep it alive, before the District girl's woods got her in trouble again on the twenty-third and required five to get on the green as Miss Orcutt won the hole with a regulation par.

Miss Barton granted a reprieve when Ellamae Williams, of Chicago, her second-round rival, drove out of bounds on the eighteenth to let the Briton win on the nineteenth, apparently got another against Miss Glutting.

Charlotte, also on the eighteenth, hit two fine shots and then tried to steer her approach. It went into a trap and cost her a chance to take the match. Her drive on the nineteenth landed up against a stone wall. She chipped out onto the fairway, plunked a No. 6 iron within less than 2 feet of the pin and, when

Eight Thirty Scores 5th Straight Victory

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Eight thirty, the three-year-old of the hour, romped to his fifth straight stakes triumph when he easily won the mile and a quarter Whitney at the prohibitive odds of 1 to 15. George D. Widener's chestnut colt, deprived of a crack at Johnstown in the Travers when early morning mud caused the Woodward star to scratch, scored by a length over W. V. McGrath's Chilean mare, Shangay Lily. Another mare, Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Handcuff, was third and last in the small field, another three lengths behind.

For his triumph in the twelfth running of this weight-for-age fixture, Eight Thirty earned a purse of $2,750, boosting his 1939 total to $39,125. The son of Pilate galloped the distance in 2:06 1-5.

Last Race at Spa

Thus Eight Thirty, now regarded as one of the chief claimants to the 3-year-old championship, closed out the last of his four stakes engagements at the Spa. He won the Diamond State Stakes at Delaware prior to shipping here. His local record shows easy victories in the Wilson, Saratoga Handicap, Travers and today's Whitney. Where he goes from here has not been announced.

Handcuff and Shangay Lily both closed at 20 to 1.

As in the Travers, when the lowly Sir Marlboro made most of the running, Harry Richards, Eight Thirty's rider, allowed Handcuff to hold a narrow lead over his mount until rounding out of the backstretch. Handcuff is known for her lack of early foot, as is Shangay Lily, but somebody had to make the pace and Richards refused to have his mount be the one.

Eight Thirty the Master

Once they left the far side, Eight Thirty was the master. He opened up several lengths lead entering the stretch and was four in front at the eighth pole. Handcuff was through, but Shangay Lily, a recent surprise winner here, closed with a rush. Richards looked around about 15 yards from the finish and saw the charging 20-to-1 shot closing in. He roused the favorite but was not in jeopardy.

Alice Marble Heads Wightman Cup Tennis Team

The selections, announced by the United States Lawn Tennis Association, brought no surprises. In addition to Miss Marble, the team will be composed of Helen Hull Jacobs, of Berkeley, Calif., former National champion; Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Brookline, Mass.; Dorothy May Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif.; Dorothy Workman, of Los Angeles, and Mary Arnold, of Los Angeles.

The line-up for the singles and doubles matches will be announced tomorrow by Mrs. George Wightman, donor of the cup and captain of the United States team, tomorrow afternoon when the draw will be made at the West Side Tennis Club.

Pep Young's Grounder Is Lone Hit

Only Five Pirates Reach First Base; Bees Win First, 1-0, And Nightcap, 3-1

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 23.—A bounding grounder to deep short that Pep Young beat out robbed Sailor Bill Posedel of a no-hitter today as the Boston Bees captured two games from the floundering Pittsburgh Pirates.

Posedel turned in a 1-hit 1-0 shutout in the opener for his thirteenth victory of the season, while the Veteran Danny Macfayden stymied the Bucs 3-1 in the second game.

The lone hit off Posedel came when Young led off the fifth inning with a roller that Rabbit Warstler had to fade back to field. The Rabbit came up with the ball cleanly but his whip failed by inches to nip Young, a fairly fast runner.

Only five Pirates reached first and none advanced as far as second. Two got on via errors, one of them by Posedel, and two others were walked.

The Bees' only run off Mace Brown, who went the route for the Bucs, came in the eighth when Al Simmons singled, and Outlaw, running for Simmons, took second on Sassett's bunt and scored on Cuccinello's single.

In the second game, Pittsburgh outhit the Bees, but the Boston boys bunched four hits in the fourth, including doubles by Majeski and Garms and a triple by Warstler, to drive home three runs.

Fly Casting Record Broken

San Francisco, Aug. 23 (AP).—R. J. Miller, Huntington Park, Calif., cast a salmon fly 186 feet today, to claim the national record for a single cast in the National Association of Scientific Angling Clubs tournament.

With an average cast of 175 feet 8 inches for the event, he tied for first place with M. J. Kraft, of San Francisco.

Phil Miravalle, of San Francisco, was third, with an average of 174 feet 8 inches, and Ernest Liotta, jr., Cleveland, fourth, with 174 feet 4 inches.

Bob Prichard Back at First For Nationals

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 23.—Discharged in disgrace five weeks ago, young Bob Prichard tomorrow will bounce back into the Washington line-up as the Nats No. 1 first baseman, due to circumstances beyond his control.

When the Nats take the field against the Tigers for the start of a three-game series, the stocky youth who was shipped to Springfield because he couldn't hit big-league pitching will be back at the job he lost. In desperation, Manager Bucky Harris is restoring Prichard to the first-base post.

Prichard was classed a total failure after being called to the Nats from Charlotte earlier in the summer. His utter futility at bat caused Harris to bade him begone before he demoralized the rest of the club. There was doubt that the Nats would even recall him for another trial in the spring.

Replaces Vernon

But a week ago Harris found Prichard on his hands again. Commissioner Landis stepped into Joe Cambria's Springfield muddle and ordered Cambria to return Prichard to Washington. Prichard was one of four players involved when Landis cracked down on Cambria for alleged irregularities in operating the Springfield team.

And now Prichard represents something of a Washington hope, because Harris is completely dissatisfied with the play of young Jimmy Vernon, who for five weeks has been attempting to hold down the Nats' first base job. Vernon, an excellent target for infielders, has been swinging a very puny bat for the Nats, maintaining a meager .230 average and showing little power.

But there is another complaint against Vernon in addition to his weak hitting. He has showed a consistent weakness on hard-hit ground

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 23.—Detroit, the only place in the world where it could happen, is warming up to the Joe Louis-Bob Pastor fight at a rate that insures Promoter Mike Jacobs a substantial profit on a match that he booked merely to sustain the late-summer interest in his industry.

POVICH

In New York, Jacobs' timid suggestion of a Louis-Pastor affair was laughed down. The unfragrant memories of their last engagement still assailed the nostrils of the East. Jacobs had to take his fight elsewhere, and fortunately there was a spot for it—Detroit.

Pastor has already set up his training camp here for the September 20 battle. Louis is due in town with his retinue tomorrow, but the presence of the two principals has not been necessary to steam-up Detroit folks. The town, fight-starved and prosperous, is peculiarly a set-up even for such a cheap title affair as a Pastor-Louis fight.

Detroit, in fact, has never been host to a world heavyweight championship bout, and the September 20 thing, however unpalatable it may be to the East, is nevertheless a title fight. Detroit has not seen a pair of champions of any division in the same ring for a dozen years in fact. The last title bout here was a Jackie Fields-Vince Dundee welter fight.

Jacobs' Luck That Pastor Is Detroit Hero

And it is Jacobs' luck that Pastor, discredited everywhere else in the country as a fangless, back-pedalling, glorified light heavyweight, is something of a hero in Detroit. Fighting for peanuts in a comeback attempt a year ago, Pastor knocked over a string of stumble-bums and then fired the imagination of local burghers by knocking out Oscar Toles, the big Detroit Negro, who had been fancied as a coming champion.

All of a sudden Pastor assumed stature as a knocker-out, something he had never been accused of before, and the fact that he had lasted the full 10 rounds against Louis made him a figure in Detroit. Jacobs' suggestion of a Louis-Pastor bout here was an instant hit.

It was something of a natural for Detroit, too, because despite the fact that Louis has transferred his domicile to Chicago, he is, after all, a Detroit product. The fact that Louis has fallen from grace with Negro society in Detroit as a result of his preference for Chicago won't hurt the gate either. Detroit colored folks might want to see him licked.

The advance sale for the bout is no less than amazing. With the fight nearly a month distant, Promoter Jacobs reports that the advance sale has already topped the $150,000 mark. There are no predictions of a million-dollar gate but the pre-fight ticket sale is significant. At a corresponding date before his last million-dollar bout, Jacobs did not have $100,000 in the till.

Detroit corporations are making a party of the affair and ordering tickets in great blocks as a gesture toward factory officials and branch managers. The fight, scheduled for the peak of the new-model automobile season, will be a feature of sales convention programs in Detroit. One automobile company ordered $2,700 worth of tickets upon announcement of the fight and another purchased $2,000 worth of seats.

15,000 Additional Seats Being Built

The Detroit ball park, which seats 50,000 persons, won't suffice the customers, Jacobs believes. Anyway, he is proceeding with arrangements to install seats on the playing field to take care of 15,000 additional payees. The battle that loomed as a white elephant on his hands now promises him a neat profit.

Loud-shouting Johnston, manager of Pastor, is congratulating himself on his maneuver in getting the fight booked for 20 rounds instead of the conventional 15. He reasons that Pastor, who stayed away from Louis successfully for 10 rounds, may outlast him over the added distance and possibly make away with the decision.

But if the fight endures more than five rounds, you will be able to brain boxing experts with a feather. Louis is a far more polished fighter than he was two years ago when he didn't know how to catch Pastor. And since then he has been fighting his best fights against men who try to get away from him.

Louis knew how to handle Schmeling in their second fight, for example. He caught up with him in a hurry, inside of 2 minutes, in fact, and had him helpless. Nobody ever accused Pastor of being as clever as Schmeling, and Louis is getting to be a bright boy inside those ropes.

Aussies 5-2 to Win In Davis Cup Play

By the United Press.

Chestnut Hill, Mass., Aug. 23.—Australia's double-duty duo of Adrian Quist and Jack Bromwich were 5-2 favorites tonight to sweep through Yugoslavia in the interzone Davis Cup finals, which start tomorrow on the lush lawn of Longwood Cricket Club.

The victor in this best-of-five-match series faces the United States in the challenge round at Merion Cricket Club, Haverford, Pa., the first week-end in September. And the Aussies, who last won the famed trophy two decades ago, are conceded an excellent chance of lifting it again.

QUIST

The lithe-limbed Quist, ranked sixth internationally, was expected to have but slight trouble with Drago Mitic, 21, youngest member of the Yugoslavian squad, in tomorrow's first singles match.

Quist, winner of the Longwood Bowl last month, apparently had overcome the foot faults which marred his play against Don Budge in last year's challenge round. Mitic, comparatively inexperienced in major competition, was selected after twice defeating teammate Franjo Kukuljevic in practice matches here.

Bromwich, a 20-year-old veteran who strokes with either or both hands, may have difficulty turning back Ferenc Puncec, a slashing aggressive player who upset Germany's Henner Jenkel in the European final. Bobby Riggs, this Nation's current No. 1 man, has predicted Puncec will win both his singles matches.

Puncec, spokesman for the Yugoslavians, was pessimistic about his team's chances. Asked if his gloomy

Marathon Net Duel to Dee; Hunt Victor

By the Associated Press

Newport, R. I., Aug. 23.—Two 17-year-old sophomores, Larry Dee, of San Francisco, and Bill Gillespie, of Atlanta, waged one of the tightest tennis battles of the grass season today before the former gained the last available quarter-finals bracket in the Newport Casino tournament.

Dee's impressive backhand, plus his amazing stamina decided matters 4—6, 19—17, 6—4, after a struggle that lasted almost three hours under a blazing sun.

Dave Freeman, of Pasadena, Calif., became the other unseeded survivor when he accounted for Frank Guernsey, of Orlando, Fla., the national intercollegiate titlist, 2—6, 6—2, 6—4.

The seeded list suffered another dent when Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Oreg., its No. 4 man, was forced to default to Hal Surface, of Kansas City, as the latter had him five games to four and 30—15.

Sabin sprained his right hand playing against Frank Shields of New York yesterday and he aggravated that injury when he tripped and fell on it chasing one of Surface's lobs.

The other high seeded players advanced without serious opposition. Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, topped Bob Kamrath, of Austin, Tex., 6—4, 6—4; Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, Atlanta, eliminated Ernest Sutter, New Orleans, 6—4, 6—2, and Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., dropped but one game to Henry Prusoff, of Seattle.

The others to gain the round of eight were Gardnar Mulloy, of Coral Gables, Fla., with a 6—8, 6—1, 6—3 win over Russell Bobbitt, of Atlanta, and Gil Hunt, of Washington, who turned back Morey Lewis, of Texarkana, Ark., the Canadian champion, 8—6, 6—4.

Walter Hagen Golf Play Begins Today

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 23.—Golf will stage a "swing party" tomorrow in honor of one of the game's all-time-greats—Walter Hagen.

Out at Midlothian Country Club, where Hagen won his first National Open championship 25 years ago this summer, "The Haig" will participate in an invitational tournament which will include some of the greatest names in the sport.

Hagen and another colorful veteran, Gene Sarazan, will make up one of the eight teams which will play in the round robin, best ball event. The team winning the most holes will take down $1,150 of the $5,400 total prize money subscribed by friends of the fairways star whose victory at Midlothian in 1914 signalized the start of as brilliant a career as the sport has known.

Heurich Beats Pepco, 7-0, in First Game for District Title

Colliflower Pitches 7-Hit Shutout; Pepco Hindered by Fielding; Knight Gets Homer

A team of hard-hitting fellows known as the Heurich Brewers yesterday started a determined drive for the District sandlot baseball crown with a convincing 7-0 defeat of Pepco on the East Ellipse in the first meeting of the two teams for the city championship.

With his mates giving him grade A support in the field, Ed Colliflower, Heurich's lanky right-hander, allowed seven scattered hits in shutting out Pepco, winner of the Government League. The teams meet again Saturday at Griffith Stadium in the final play to pick the District's representative in the National Federation of Amateur Baseball tourney here next month.

Pepco was hindered by lackadaisical playing in the outfield—which had a large part in accounting for four of Heurich's runs—and were ineffective at bat when a possible victory was within their grasp. Some 2,500 persons braved the heat to watch the business.

Dick Knight's home run in the sixth inning for Heurich caught Pepco's centerfielder and rightfielder flat-footed. Both started after the ball with a "let George do it" approach that finally ended with the ball headed unhampered for the White House lawn. Fee Colliere, who had been walked, scored on the home run.

Heurich pushed over three runs in the fourth inning on as many hits that were not above suspicion. Sully Sullivan walked, went to second on a sacrifice by Colliere and scored on Colliflower's single to center. Eddie Fitzpatrick rushed in to make the catch, but suddenly elected to let it drop in front of him.

Knight hit a lazy fly to right center which fell for a hit, and then Pep Barry sent a smashing triple to center, scoring Colliflower and Knight.

In position to get back in the game in the fifth, Pepco saw its chances fade when, with the bases full, Cleo Chumbris let the third strike go by without doing anything about it.

Plaza Ten Defeats Navy in Title Series

Going into the sixth inning tied, 1-1, with Carr and Boswell, International Business Machines softball ten turned on the power and pushed across two runs to win the game, 3-1, yesterday at Eastern Stadium and come a step nearer to the playoff rounds for the District championship. At the same time, Plaza Wine and Liquor eliminated Navy Department, 6-3.

Bobby Plaisted, who held Carr to three hits, participated in the winning surge with a single to center which scored Shortfielder Thorne. Catcher Creamer had walked and scored on Thorne's single early in the inning.

Machines' run in the third, scored when Jack Smith doubled and reached home on Creamer's grounder to first, was matched by Carr in its half when Noble singled and scored on Frey's grounder. The spectators passed up the Plaza-Navy game almost entirely for the Machines affair.

Outhit, 9 to 8, Plaza capitalized on Navy errors to win. Charley Kendall's sixth inning home run stole the show.

The Cardinal Infield 'Mobs' Lavagetto but He's Safe at Second

St. Louis Cardinal Pitcher Bob Bowman caught Dodger Infielder Cookie Lavagetto off first base but he made it safely to second in the rundown when First Baseman Don Padgett dropped the ball as he threw to second. Softball Players Honored at Regal Sports Banquet

John Hinton, outstanding pitcher of the Carley's softball team, and Abe Rosenfeld, crack pitcher of the Tru-Blu team, last night were honored at a banquet tendered by Pat Regal, sponsor of the Regal Softball League, at Livera's.

Hinton, mainspring in the Carley's drive to the Regal championship, was presented with a trophy for being the outstanding player in the league, while Rosenfeld also was rewarded with a trophy for being No. 1 softball player in Washington, and the man who had done more for softball locally than any one else.

In addition to the tributes paid Hinton and Rosenfeld, 18 gold softballs were awarded to members of the winning Carley's team. The players receiving the softballs were Mike Sugrue, Cleve Beall, Bernard Watson, Charles Suit, Ears Woltman, Tim Nelligan, Jim Carley, jr., Bob Hicks, Reds Thornton, Woody Beall, Dave Zinkle, Milton Watson, Luke Thorne, Artie Sheahan, Johnny Hinton, Dick Barnes and Jimmie Gousha.

Harold Vincent, secretary of the District Softball Association, served as master of ceremonies. Speeches also were made by "Shorty" Feindt, league president; Winfree Johnson, softball commissioner; Jim Carley, sponsor of the champion team, and Gene George, secretary of the league. Sponsor Carley also presented John Hinton with a gold watch for his untiring efforts with the Carley team.

Singh and Ryan Wrestle Tonight At Turner's Arena

With six wrestling gentlemen who haven't been seen around Washington for more than a year making a mass comeback in supporting bouts, Nanjo Singh tonight makes his tenth headline appearance at Turner's Arena in the cofeature match with Red Ryan. Jack Hader and Rudy Strongberg will meet in the other main affair.

Singh's performance tonight will break "all existing records for consecutive appearances," Promoter Joe Turner's agents proclaimed yesterday.

"The gigantic crowds, growing each week, are full proof that the Hindu is in demand here," the proclamation read. "Singh will attempt to victimize Ryan with his cobra clutch. He beat Ryan once before, but this time it will be different, Ryan declares."

Supporting noises before the "gigantic crowd" of 1,900 or so will be made by Ralph Garibaldi and Jack Kennedy, Ed Newman and Stanley Pinto, Tommy Rae and Eddie Cook—as cute a sextet of cauliflower-eared lads as you could expect to find around any wrestling emporium.

Armstrong's Pilot to Demand N. Y. Reverse Ambers Decision

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 23.—Amid the squawks and confusion which followed the Lou Ambers-Henry Armstrong lightweight title scrap, came these developments today:

1. Eddie Mead, manager of Armstrong, said he would demand the New York State reverse the unanimous verdict awarding the championship to Ambers.

2. The vanquished Armstrong abandoned his career as a lightweight because of weight trouble to concentrate on the defense of his welterweight crown.

3. Mead reiterated he would not again send Armstrong to the post in New York.

4. With Mead's blasts going in one ear and out the other, Promoter Mike Jacobs went blithely ahead with plans to stage an Armstrong-Ambers welterweight title show in Madison Square Garden November 1.

Meantime, in the pubs, poolrooms and cigar stores along Broadway the fight faithful fought the battle all over again with first Armstrong, then Ambers emerging the winner, according to the point of view.

For every freeholder who thought the decision was just, you could find another who swore just as vehemently that little Henry was the victim of one of the most flagrant cases of grand larceny ever perpetrated on a "suspecting" New York fight public.

Hollingsworth Holds St. Louis; Red Birds Now 5½ Games Back

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Aug. 23.—The unpredictable Dodgers completed a sweep of their three-game series with the St. Louis Cardinals today by taking an 8-to-3 victory behind the steady eight-hit hurling of Lefty Al Hollingsworth.

Turning in his first win since joining the Dodgers, Hollingsworth had a no-hitter for four innings in leading Brooklyn to its fourth straight victory.

The setback just about ended any immediate Cardinal threat on the National League lead, for it left them 5½ games off Cincinnati's pace.

A pair of runs off Morton Cooper in the first frame and four more in the third was all the Dodgers needed.

Naiman Photo diamonders won their third straight over the Cardinals yesterday, 15-8, scoring seven runs in the tenth inning to turn the trick.

Trailing 8-2 in the fourth inning, the Photo nine tied it up in the ninth and Frank Smith batted in the first and winning run in the tenth with his fourth hit in five times at bat. Silverman settled down and pitched hitless ball in the last five innings. It was the twenty-sixth victory in 29 starts for the winners, who lay claim to the mythical city title.

'Old-Time' Yank Hits Smother Chisox Twice

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 23.—Behind steady effective pitching by Rookie Atley Donald and Veteran Red Ruffing, the New York Yankees paraded to a double-header victory over the White Sox today, 7 to 2 and 16 to 4, before some 25,000 cash customers.

The champions collected a total of 28 hits, 19 of them in the nightcap, when Joe Gordon smashed a homer with the bases loaded and Joe DiMaggio banged his twentieth four-bagger of the season. Gordon's blow was his twenty-first.

The double win, achieved over a pair of left-handers, boosted the Yanks' American League lead to eight full games.

Donald, who had tried four times previously for his thirteenth win of the season, after his record run of 12 in a row had been broken, finally found the combination in the opener. He tossed a one-hitter through the sixth. The Yanks landed on Ed Smith for two runs each in the second, third and fourth frames. White Sox Manager Jimmy Dykes was tossed out of this game by the umpires for arguing over a decision.

Red Ruffing posted his nineteenth victory against four defeats in the nightcap. Although he was tagged for ten hits, he was never in serious trouble. Every man in the starting line-up except First Baseman Babe Dahlgren hit safely at least once. Charley Keller collected four hits, DiMaggio had two singles in addition to his homer. Bill Dickey belted three doubles and Ruffing, himself, had three singles.

The Yanks blasted Lefty Thornton Lee for a pair of runs in the first frame and were never headed.

Derringer Blanks Phils, Reds Win, 3-0

Phillies 10 Hits Well Scattered; Harry Craft Homers

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 23. — The league-leading Cincinnati Reds advanced their margin by a full game today by making hay with the Phillies, 3 to 0, while the Brooklyn Dodgers were defeating second-place St. Louis.

At the outset, the Phillies kept nibbling at Paul Derringer's baffling stuff, getting at least one safe hit in six of the first seven innings. But that's all it meant. None of the hitmakers could get far enough around to score, although they collected ten blows in all off Derringer.

Harry Craft's homer into the lower leftfield stands in the fifth gave the Reds their first run—and enough to win.

The other two runs came in the eighth when Cincinnati collected four of the eight hits yielded by Frank Beck.

Greyhound Sets Track Record, but Misses World Mark

Milwaukee, Aug. 23 (AP).—Greyhound, the world champion trotter, failed to lower his 1:55¼ mile but came through with an exhibition run at the Wisconsin State Fair today that clipped 1¾ seconds off the old track record.

The gray gelding by Buy Abbey, with the veteran Sep Palin up, turned in a 1:58 performance before a crowd of about 13,000 harness fans.

Peter Astra, the 1939 Hambletonian winner, was originally entered in the free-for-all trot on the Grand Circuit program here but his trainer and driver, Dr. H. M. Parshall, of Urbana, Ohio, put him through a mile exhibition trot instead—the bay colt coming under the wire in 2:02½.

Cubs Pound 3 Pitchers, Rout Giants

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 23.—The Chicago Cubs moved a game nearer second place in the National League today by belting three pitchers for a dozen hits to trounce the Giants, 8 to 3, in the odd match of their three-game series.

Paced by Hank Leiber, who collected a double and homer, and Billy Herman, who sparked a four-run fourth inning rally with a four-bagger, the Cubs drove Harry Gumbert to the showers in the fifth and continued their hitting at he expense of Japh Lynn and Dick Coffman.

Lula Khayyam Wins Feature at Marlboro Before 7,000

Lead Please, The Favorite, Runs Second

Daily Double Pays $49.80, Winner's Second Triumph In Eleven Starts

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Marlboro, Md., Aug. 23.—Racing returned to the Southern Maryland tobacco belt this afternoon with a crowd of 7,000 comprising the welcoming committee. The customers kept the new totalizator busy but only a chosen few bothered the cashiers after the running of the Willard Hotel Purse, feature event on the seven-race program. Victory went to Henry Massey's Lula Khayyam, a 4-year-old filly and the spoils, in the form of a substantial $31.50 mutuel was gathered by those who held the all-important No. 4 tickets.

The daughter of Omar Khayyam ran around the course like a scared rabbit and finished with speed in reserve four lengths ahead of her nearest opposition, Lead Please, the favorite in the field of eight. The choice closed with a rush to take second money from Margie Wrack in a photo finish.

Second Victory in 11 Starts

Lula Khayyam's recent form discouraged many would-be backers. She had been away from the winner's circle since June 2 at Charles Town. However, she proved her liking for this track last year. Today's triumph gave her two victories in 11 starts this season. Apprentice Jockey R. Bernhardt had the mount on the filly and had only to sit still.

Lula came out of the starting gate for the 5½-furlong test in first position. She shook off Margie Wrack's early bid and went out to run by herself. There was not a serious challenge of her superiority under the conditions. With 106 pounds aboard, she opened a lead gradually and was in hand approaching the finish line.

Closes With Rush

Lead Please, the favorite and ridden by Jockey Sammy Palumbo, was off in a tangle and was hard ridden thereafter. The mare closed with a rush but too late to menace the flying Lula.

The camera boys were kept busy during the afternoon and one of their many pictures settled a $49.80 daily double pay-off on a large group. After Mamie's Lad had won the first race, Schley Buck and La Loutre staged a thrilling stretch battle in which the camera gave the final nod to Schley Buck.

Jockey Palumbo brought his followers to their feet in the fifth race when he brought the ancient but honorable Counter Pass from far back to take a photo decision in the concluding jump. Gracky was second. Counter Pass paid $7.90.

D. C. Junior Golfers Top Baltimore

Brownell Beats Otto Greiner With Birdie on 18th; Bogart's 74 Best

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Pikesville, Md., Aug. 23.—Winning two matches and gaining a halve in another on the eighteenth green, a ten-man team of District junior golfers used the finishing hole as a margin of victory in defeating Baltimore's best under-21 stars, 8½ to 6½, here today over the Woodholme course.

It was the second straight victory for Bobby Brownell's team, but the margin was much closer than last year's double-score rout. Otto Greiner placed his second and third best men down in the third and fourth foursomes, but he only batted .500 on the scheme of padding the line-up.

Wins With Birdie

It was the eighth victory in two years for District golf teams in the intercity rivalry with their neighbors. The women's all-star squad holds three victories, the amateurs and juniors two each, and the pros a victory and a tie in two matches.

Most important of the last hole finishes was Brownell's birdie three that defeated Greiner for the second year in the No. 1 match. Leading two up at the turn, Bobby lost the eleventh to a birdie, halved the next six and the seventeenth to a par, squaring the match. He dropped his second shot 4 feet from the cup on the dog-leg finishing hole and rammed the putt home for a birdie after Greiner missed the green with his second but chipped dead for a sure par.

David "Scotty" Ross, Capital Club representative, parred the eighteenth against former Mid-Atlantic Junior Champ Johnny Farrell, playing in the sixth spot, to win the hole and the match. Bob Brown, also of Capitol, holed a chip shot off the edge of the eighteenth green to break even with Wally Engle, Hillendale youngster.

Day's Best Round

Best round of the day was Ralph Bogart's one-over-par 74, as the lightning fast greens sent most of the juniors well over par. Bogart defeated Jack Bierman, 6 and 4, while his partner, Earle Skinker, was way off his game and scrambled to an even break with Herbert Wagner, jr. Buddy Sharkey played good golf in the No. 2 spot to hand George Rice a 4-and-3 defeat, and paired well with Brownell to win by a like margin over the best ball of Greiner and Rice.

Eddie Johnston, Baltimore's top-ranking public links star, played No. 7 and won over Jack Robinson, Indian Spring, 4 and 3. George Vass and George DeWitt, Kenwood and Congressional players, were upset victims, while the District's other victory went to Frank Williamson, Kenwood, who routed Ned Cook by the second biggest margin of the day, 5 and 4.

WASHINGTON, 8½; BALTIMORE, 6½

Bobby Brownell (Manor) defeated Otto Greiner (Baltimore), 1 up; Buddy Sharkey (Indian Spring) defeated George Rice (Baltimore), 4 and 3; best ball, Brownell and Sharkey, 4 and 3.

Ralph Bogart (Indian Spring) defeated Jack Bierman (Baltimore), 6 and 4; Earle Skinker (Columbia) and Herbert Wagner, jr., (Baltimore), all even; best ball, Bogart and Skinker, 5 and 4.

Duncan McRae (Baltimore) defeated George Vass (Kenwood), 2 and 1; David Ross (Capital) defeated Johnny Farrell (Baltimore), 1 up; best ball, McRae and Farrell, 2 and 1.

Eddie Johnston (Baltimore) defeated Jack Robinson (Indian Spring), 4 and 3; Bob Brown (Capital) and Wally Engle (Baltimore), all even; best ball, Johnston and Engle, 4 and 3.

Frank Williamson (Kenwood) defeated Ned Cook (Baltimore), 5 and 4; Arthur Johnson (Baltimore) defeated George De Witt (Congressional), 1 up; best ball, all even.

balls, a failing that Harris hoped he would overcome. In Cleveland last night, however, Vernon piled on the last straw. He failed to come up with a ball hit by Hal Trosky, and it evolved as a two-base hit, which was the decisive blow of the Nats' defeat.

Harris figuratively tore his hair at the spectacle of the ball getting away from Vernon, and his announcement that Prichard would get the first base job henceforth was not long in following.

"I can't understand how a fellow who can make such fancy plays on poor throws can be so awful on batted balls," said Harris, "from here on, Prichard will play first base, at least most of the time. And he may give us that long hit that Vernon never gave us."

Tomorrow Harris will send his No. 1 pitcher, Dutch Leonard, at the Tigers. Leonard's last pitching effort was his fourteenth victory of the season, a 2-0 shutout job against the Boston Red Sox. Paul Trout, Detroit right hander, with a record of six wins and eight defeats, will pitch for the Tigers.

The Nats arrived from Cleveland today in time to see the last three innings of the Tigers-A's game in which the A's beat the Tigers in 11 innings . . . They were not impressed with Freddie Hutchinson's pitching for the Tigers, particularly when he served Dick Siebert a high inside pitch that Siebert banged for a home run in the eleventh . . . Rudy York looked completely at home at first base, where he is replacing the injured Hank Greenberg.

Stone Softball Game a Success If It's Up to Efforts of 'Curly'

'Curly' White Runs Whole Show—Tru-Blu Versus All-Stars Tomorrow

"Curly" White, boss of the softball all-stars scheduled to meet Tru-Blu Friday night in Griffith Stadium in the Johnny Stone benefit game, has guaranteed the success of the game with his own efforts.

The youngster is not only rounding up the all-stars, dispensing the publicity, placing the placards, and handling the advance ticket sale, but is also limbering his right arm for the mound assignment against the Beermen, victors in 56 of 59 games this year.

The entire receipts will go to the Johnny Stone day testimonital game, scheduled September 17 at Griffith Stadium. A preliminary at 7:30 will find Sholl's Cafeteria Girls against the Arlington County All-Stars.

White, who works in the concession stand at the stadium, is getting help from Col. Billy Smith, his boss, and Clark Griffith, who has turned over the office facilities.

The advance sales includes 50 tickets each by the Washington and Boston teams, while Tom Jarrell, of the Tru Blue organization, purchased 100 tickets. Griffith started the advance sale.

Ostermueller Beats Browns With 4 Hits

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 23.—Fritz Ostermueller, a southpaw, set the St. Louis Browns down with four hits—two of them in the ninth inning—as the Boston Red Sox took the second and final of a short series today by a score of 9 to 1.

The Browns bunched their first two singles and a sacrifice to put over the one run in the fourth inning. From then to the ninth Fritz allowed only one man to reach first base.

While the Sox battered three Brownie pitchers for 16 hits, most of the first was in the bats of Jimmy Foxx and Jim Tabor. Each had a perfect day with four for four.

Surveying a squad of six in practice, Pate said he didn't want all the responsibility, and added:

"I wish more members of the Davis Cup committee would come here and look over the players. Holcombe Ward (president of the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association) is coming over from New York at a great inconvenience to himself, and his cooperation is greatly appreciated for he knows tennis."

Macks Defeat Hutchinson, Tigers in 11th

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 23.—Three Philadelphia batters found the range on Freddy Hutchinson, high-priced Detroit rookie, here today and as a result the Athletics took a 7-to-6 decision in 11 innings to split the two-game series.

Bob Johnson, Dick Siebert and Dario Lodigiani each nicked Hutchinson for a double and a home run, between them accounting for six of the Philadelphia runs, Johnson's homer was his twentieth.

Grains Climb Swiftly as War Clouds Gather

Wheat Jumps Nearly 4 Cents in Chicago And Corn Gains 3

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 23.—North American grain prices skyrocketed today as the current European crisis assumed more threatening proportions.

Wheat futures on the Board of Trade soared nearly 4 cents a bushel and corn was up more than 3 cents. All wheat contracts at Winnipeg advanced 5 cents, the prescribed limit. Closing prices were near the peaks.

Confirmation of a report that the Canadian Wheat Board had withdrawn offerings of wheat, at least temporarily, and advices that the Canadian cabinet would meet tomorrow to discuss emergency measures should tension abroad increase, swept aside opposition to price advances.

London cables reported war risk rates were advanced sharply, being trebled in some instances. Export business of North American wheat was estimated at 300,000 bushels, mostly Manitobas, but some observers believed demand was much greater than indicated by the figures.

All Grains at Season's High

Wheat on the Board of Trade closed 3⅛@3⅜ higher, September 70@70¼, December 70⅜@70½; corn 2¼@2⅜ up, September 45¾@45⅞, December 46⅛@46⅜; oats 1⅛@1⅜ up; soy beans 1½@1⅝ higher, rye ½@1⅞ up, lard 10@15 cents higher.

All May grain futures contracts on the Board of Trade scored new season highs and all wheat and corn deliveries were at new highs for the movement. September wheat was up 3⅛ to 70⅜ and September and May were up as much as 3⅞ at the maximum. Corn for December delivery was 3½ cents up at best.

Kansas City wheat closed 2⅛@3⅜ up and Minneapolis 3¼@3¾ higher. Liverpool, after dipping below yesterday's close, firmed and finished unchanged to ⅝ higher. The English market ignored yesterday's weakness here and opened ⅝@¾ up, but profit taking and renewed Argentine pressure produced a reaction before the closing up turn.

Cotton Futures Drop 40 to 85 Cents Per Bale

New York, Aug. 23 (AP).—The cotton futures market took a look at the news from Europe today and didn't like it. Prices dropped 8 to 17 points when buying came in feebly at best and selling showed no signs of letting up. Cotton in the past often has dropped when war news was in the air.

The market started off on a fairly even keel but when securities started to slip and transatlantic cables became more and more ominous, the selling tempo quickened and buyers sidestepped nervously.

Cottonseed Oil

Heavy covering by shorts forced cottonseed oil futures 29 to 31 points higher today. Foreign interests were on the buying side while orders for cotton oil against sales of lard also helped the market. Sales totaled 349 lots: September, 5.71 bid; October, 5.85; December, 5.98; January, 6.06; March, 6.15.

Scattered sales of crude oil were reported in the Valley at 4¾ cents. Southeast bid 4¾ and Texas the same.

War Risk Rates To Axis Nations Upped 20-Fold

New York, Aug. 23 (AP).—War risk insurance rates on shipments of goods to Germany and Italy from the United States were increased 20-fold today by Marine Insurance Underwriters.

The new rates, applying to all transatlantic surface shipping, will go into effect at 9 a. m. tomorrow.

The war risk rates from the United States to the British Isles remain unchanged. Underwriters saying they believed that the British Isles navy would be able to control the northern shipping routes in event of hostilities.

The decision to boost the rates was made by a committee of underwriters representing various American firms engaged in the insurance of maritime shipping.

Until now, the war risk rate on shipments to Germany and Italy has been ¼ of 1 per cent of the valuation of the goods insured. Tomorrow shippers must pay 5 per cent of the valuation.

Rates to the Baltic and Mediterranean—the latter considered separately from shipments to Italy—also were raised, although not to so great an extent as the German-Italian boost.

Underwriters explained that they believed France and Great Britain would immediately establish a naval blockade of Europe in the event of an outbreak of war.

U. S. Reports Uptrend in Retail Sales

South Leads Nation With 11½ Per Cent Gain Over July, 1938

Efforts to speed business recovery were pushed ahead on two fronts yesterday by the Department of Commerce, one aimed at direct stimulation of trade and the other intended to supply business men with better facts on which to guide their courses.

A token that the economic picture is brightening came meanwhile in the report of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce that retail sales in July were considerably above the volume for the same month in 1938, although reflecting the normal decline from May and June of this year.

The South led the four major trade regions in the upswing, with retail sales 11½ per cent higher than in July, 1938. The Far West was second, recording a gain of 10 per cent, while sales in the East advanced 6 per cent and in the Middle West, 4.1 per cent.

Dollar Values Not Given

Dollar values were not given, the bureau's report being based on comparative indices between the 1929-31 average of 100 and business for the month. Retail sales in the South were 103.8, as compared with 92.9 in July, 1938; Far West, 115.2 as contrasted to 105.8; East, 86.3 as against 82.2, and the Middle West, 81.8 against 77.7.

Sales in each region in June, 1939, relatively a heavy month normally, were: South, 133.3; Far West, 137.3; East, 120; Middle West, 109.9. Officials explained the vacation season slackening of trade was usual for July and would continue through August, the normal seasonal upswing coming in September.

A roving division of trade boosters came officially into being also, the Department announcing formation of the Industrial Economics Division, a new section. Richard V. Gilbert, formerly public finance expert of Harvard University, was named director. The organization will function under the immediate direction of Secretary Hopkins.

Will Be Mobile Unit

Under the general plan for operating the division, it will be a mobile unit, the various economic and business experts being assigned to headquarters or field work intended to promote business and commerce in areas where it may be stagnant or retarded. It will not replace the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Associated with Gilbert will be: V. Lewis Bassie, former Federal Reserve Board economist; Robert L. Davison, formerly director of the housing research division of J. B. Pierce Foundation; Stewart Guthrie, formerly counsel to the Civil Aeronautics Authority; James Hughes, former assistant to the president of the Standard Gas Equipment Co., of Baltimore; Robinson Newcomb, former official of the Department of Commerce; Roderick Riley, formerly of the Consumers' Advisory Board staff; Paul Truitt, formerly with Sears, Roebuck and Co.; Carroll Wilson, formerly of Scudder, Stevens and Clark; Dudley P. K. Wood, formerly of the American Machine & Foundry Co.

Declaring reports, in the past, have failed to give businessmen the information they really need, the department announced suspension of the weekly business survey in 36 key cities, so as to revise the method of collecting and presenting basic trade data.

Power Output Sets New All-Time Peak

New York, Aug. 23 (AP).—Electric power production in the United States during the week ended August 19 advanced to the highest level on record at 2,367,646,000 kilowatt hours, the Edison Electric Institute reported today. Previous peak production was 2,362,947,000 kilowatthous in the week of December 24 last year.

Output swung up against seasonal expectations, gaining 1.5 per cent on the previous week's 2,333,403,000 kilowatthours and 10.7 per cent on 2,138,517,000 a year ago. The Associated Press index of production advanced to 122.7 from 120.7 the preceding week. Stock Slump, Grain Jump Reflects War Fear Heavy Selling Jammed Into Last Hour Treasury and Foreign Bonds Weak

New York, Aug. 23.—Security and commodity markets shaped their courses today in accordance with the war hysteria. Heavy selling of stocks broke out in the final hour of trading on a flood of liquidating orders from nervous investors and after skyrocketing wheat prices had indicated accumulation of this important munition.

The action of the stock market was packed mostly in the last hour, the lift having given ground grudgingly on a small volume of trading during the early hours. This relative firmness was patterned after the action of the foreign markets, where greater calm was noted. Both London and Paris reported rallies after early softness and when the New York market opened there was no rush to sell.

When wheat bounded forward the limit of 5 cents a bushel in Winnipeg and quotations of this commodity in all the world markets made gains of almost as much, the Street started putting more serious interpretations on the dispatches from the capitals of Europe.

Losses of 1 to nearly 5 points were sustained by speculative leaders and the composite average of the market showed a net decline of 1.05 points. This was the sharpest daily recession since April 8 and it carried the list to its lowest level since July 3. The break of early April likewise was fostered by disturbances abroad, the investor thus finding himself in the position this year where domestic trade developments make less and less difference to the value of his holdings.

Volume Rises on Decline

Disappointing to the bullish forces was the increase in volume on the big board as prices melted away after 2 o'clock. Up to that hour only 340,000 shares had changed hands. At the close the volume was 792,000 shares, making the final hour's turnover 452,000 shares.

Strength of the so-called war commodities reflected the growing apprehension before the break in securities developed. Sugar futures were bid up 3 to 7½ points, a large rise for this commodity. Cocoa, the imports of which might be interfered with by a war, shot up 22 to 23 points. On the other hand, coffee was lower and there were only small changes in copper, raw hides and wool tops and even rubber. Winnipeg started the fireworks in wheat, that market being affected also by the Canadian government's withdrawal of offers of cash wheat. Winnipeg futures were up the limit of 5 cents by 2 o'clock. Chicago prices advanced 3⅛ to 3⅜ cents a bushel. Cotton, which is usually soft on war threats, behaved according to custom and broke 8 to 17 points.

Sterling Is Firm

Pressure on the list of United States Government bonds, which became marked the first day of the week, continued with declines ranging up to ¾ points in the active issues. Nervousness kept foreign currencies under pressure, particularly sterling. The British rate was held unchanged by active support of the British fund but the discount on forward pounds widened. The yen was off 10 points. Little activity took place in the foreign gold market. Demand for the metal, which has been pronounced during some of the previous war scares, was tempered by fears of investors that such holdings would not necessarily prove a safe haven for funds in the event of actual invasion. The belief appeared to be that dollars in New York would be better than gold in London.

Illustrating the lack of importance attached to domestic trade news, as far as a guide to investments is concerned, was the sinking of United States Steel common to a new low for the year when the industry is operating at its best rate for 1939. Steel touched 42⅝ and closed at 43¼, off 2 points. Bethlehem gave up 2¼ points and Republic a point. Again the most active stock was Loft, which dropped another 1½ points. Chrysler and General Motors were down 2⅞ and 1¾ points gave up 2⅜. Aviations were a feature of weakness, holders apparently being fearful of the ability to fill foreign orders in the event of a declared war.

Favorable business included announcement of a new all time high for electric power production during the week ended August 19. This was a betterment of 1.4 per cent over the previous week-end 10.7 per cent over a year ago. The statistical position of the oil industry was improved by a reduction in gasoline stocks. The review of the steel industry by Iron Age noted the higher operating rate, with six of the nine leading producing areas reporting moderate gains. Volume of new business for most companies is running 5 to 15 per cent ahead of July, it said.

Foreign Bonds Lead Decline

Listed bonds receded further today as the news from Europe took on an ever more ominous note. Foreign dollar issues led the procession with losses of 1 to 4 points. United States Treasury issues fell by sizable fractions, and an "order market" finally was established in this field. Domestic corporation issues joined the downswing, especially in the last half-hour, when stocks also were weakest. In counter trading after the official close the losses were extended. Turnover amounted to $5,350,000.

Foreign doller bonds were sold without much regard to origin or effects of war upon the issue countries. The general endeavor was to lighten commitments. Polish bonds continued their sharp slump, while German and Italian bonds lost their gains of the preceding session. Scandinavian and Belgian bonds were heavy, and the British Empire issues also suffered. Latin-American dollar bonds merely followed the line of least resistance.

"Sell 'Em Ben" Smith Cables "No War"

New York, Aug. 23 (AP).—Bernard E. Smith—known around brokers' boardrooms as "Sell 'em Ben" in the 1929-32 bear market years — cheered Wall street today with the following cable from Paris:

"I haven't changed my opinion—no war."

Smith, a partner in the stock exchange firm of Thomson & McKinnon, has been spending the summer in Europe's "hot spots"—Poland, Rumania, etc. He acquired a reputation in Wall street as a "no war" prophet when he cabled similar views from Europe during the pre-Munich crisis last year and repeated in the spring crisis this year.

N. Y. State Hits Hard Blow at Elevator Firms

Seeks Dissolution of 18 Concerns, Charging Restraint of Trade

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 23.—State Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., acting under the New York anti-monopoly law, today moved to put out of business in this State 18 leading elevator manufacturing companies and the trade association to which they belong.

Among defendants named in papers filed in State Supreme Court were Otis Elevator Co. (of New Jersey), Westinghouse Electric Elevator Co. (of Illinois), and the National Elevator Manufacturing Industry, Inc. All three corporations have New York City offices.

Supreme Court Justice Thomas F. Noonan signed an order permitting Bennett, through his assistant, Benjamin Heffner, in charge of the Bureau of Monopolies, to bring an action seeking corporate dissolution of New York State defendants and revocation of certificates of authority to do business in New York of out-of-State defendants.

Bennett, also citing 22 officers of the defendant companies, charged them with restraining trade, fixing prices and allegedly illegally using patents, and asked an injunction restraining all the defendants from continuing the alleged illegal acts complained of.

Conspiracy Charged

The complaint alleged a "conspiracy" in which the defendants and their officers formed the association in 1935, charted member firms' business from 1928 to 1933, and thereafter agreed to allocate only a pro-rata share of subsequent business.

In the event any member failed to live up to the agreement, it was charged, members would threaten, or subject the member to patent infringement suits, based on patents allegedly owned or controlled by defendants, Otis Elevator Co., and Westinghouse Electric Elevator Co.

In furtherance of the alleged conspiracy it was agreed, according to the complaint, to circulate among the members a "white sheet" which purported to indicate the prices set by the Otis Elevator Co., at which it would sell the various types and sizes of passenger and freight elevators designated therein.

When a member offered prices below this scale, it was alleged, other members and officials of the association would by agreement intimidate the member to raise the price to the Otis levels.

The complaint charged that, accordingly, the defendants have "unreasonably restrained and prevented competition" in their field. The defendants, were alleged to design manufacture, sell and service 95 per cent of all passenger and freight elevators sold in this area.

Buick Motors to Spend $200,000,000 in 1940

Flint, Mich., Aug. 23 (AP).—An estimate that the Buick division of General Motors Corporation will disburse approximately $200,000,000 for all purposes during the 1940 model season came today from Harlow H. Curtice, Buick president, as the division held a preview of its new cars.

Curtice said that "we have set our sights on a 1940 output of 240,000 cars, representing an increase of 20 per cent over 1939 and a new high in the current phase of Buick expansion."

Steel Output 63 Per Cent, Top for Year

But War Fears Cast Cloud Over Outlook For Near Future

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 23.—Fears of what a war might do to the steel business and "distinct bright spots in the domestic picture" were described today by Iron Age magazine.

"Steel production this week," said the publication, "has advanced another half point to 63 per cent of capacity on a mill schedule which, for the industry as a whole, is the strongest for any week since October 12, 1937.

"How far the current advance in steel production will go is uncertain, since the extent to which fears of a new world war will affect buying over the next few weeks cannot be measured in advance.

"Nevertheless, the steel industry finds distinct bright spots in the domestic picture. Miscellaneous steel buying continues to improve, consumers' stocks are low, and in most districts production is not running ahead of shipments.

Prices Are Firmer

"Perhaps the most important development continues to be growing price firmness. The current operating rate is being supported by demand from a wide range of consumers, such as stove and washing machine manufacturers and barrel makers. Heavier automotive releases are expected to sustain August steel bookings in comparison with July, and producers in many districts look for a distinct improvement in shipments to Detroit after Labor Day.

"Although supplies of scrap are tight in most markets, sales have been at recently published prices, and the Iron Age scrap composite remains unchanged at $15.46 a ton. July scrap consumption is estimated at 68 per cent above the like month of 1938."

By Florence Osborn.

Psychic bidding is just as useful and popular abroad as it is in this country. Today's hand, one of the most spectacular of the international men's team play, illustrates how Denmark stole a grand slam from the Netherlands by opening the bidding and continuing to game on a jack-high hand. Denmark was set one trick, doubled, for a loss of 100 points as against the 2,210 points she would have forfeited had the adversaries bid and made the grand slam.

A. E. Manning Foster, reporting the hand for The London Observer, writes: "Seeing all four hands, you will consider it amazing that North was allowed to play the contract at five diamonds. But you must remember that neither East nor West knew that North's opening bid was psychic. Both credited him with much greater strength than he possessed."

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

Now comes a gentleman to suggest a possible "inside" reason for the President's suggestion to change the traditional date of Thanksgiving. Says he: Could it have been a trial balloon whereby the President sought to learn just how deeply rooted tradition is in America? For tradition of the same character would have to be contended with by a President seeking a third term.

U. F. W. A. Local 15 simultaneously extends its sympathy to Joseph Bloom, now in the hospital, and issues a blast against the double deck files in the V. A. basement. "This is only one of a number of similar accidents which could have been averted by having the files single-decked," it is said. The files are three floors below the street, and the lighting and ventilation are pretty bad down there.

Employes of the U. S. Maritime Commission have organized a credit union, with Daniel S. Ring, Philip F. King, William F. Yates, Mildred McCormick, Sidney Ritt, Bessie M. Bowers and Louise M. Betzig as directors. Shares in the mount of $10 each will be subscribed to, payable in multiples of $1. Interest on loans may not exceed 1 per cent per month, according to law. Dividends will be declared annually.

Daniel Clemens Sayre settles down to his new job of director of statistics and information in the CAA—a post he is spledidly qualified for. Thirty-six years old, Sayre came here from Aviation Magazine. He was born in Columbus, Ohio, was graduated from Massachusetts Institute of Technology and taught civil aeronautic engineering there.

He was one of those very nervy individuals whom the Government—before its weather fact-finding facilities were well advanced—would send up in the air 18,000 or 20,000 feet each morning to make observations. He has worked for Pan American Airways and on the side is a first rate crew man. Sayre succeeds C. B. Allen, who, last March, went to the Safety Board.

It is beginning to appear that no one will announce himself as a candidate to succeed Col. Charles I. Stengle as president of the conservative, well-behaved American Federation of Government Employes. Maybe the Colonel will have to be the president all over again, which would be O. K. by this column. He did a good job as the top man—worked hard and got results without fanfare or fuss.

Henry Iler has written in that he is not a candidate and Cecil Custer, the most touted prospect for the place, has never said that he is even running. He has received a flock of indorsements, but he has said nothing.

The point is very plain that Custer may not want the job. There are reasons why he shouldn't. He holds a ranking position in the Civil Service Commission; is a walking encyclopedia of information concerning the CSC, is highly regarded within the commission, and is well known and frequently called on by Congressmen. Sitting so pretty in a well-paying job and with the assurance that he can stay there as long as he chooses, Custer may yet say that he will not run for an A. F. G. E. post that, to say the least, is burdened with uncertainties.

It is definite that the organization won't let the Colonel go, even though he steps down from the top role. Having once been a member of Congress, his experience on the Hill is great. And this experience he has used often to the A. F. G. E.'s advantage. He has given prestige to the organization and that he will leave its ranks is among the slightest of all possibilities.

Notes: The Agriculture Department Riding Club has scheduled moonlight rides for Monday and Tuesday. . . . Employes of U. S. Housing Authority and the Branch of Building Management, two agencies of the Federal Works Agency, will become affiliated with the recently organized Public Works Association, announces Charles A. King, the PWRA vice president . . . . Nowhere in America does any group go in more strongly for outings than Uncle Sam's employes in Washington. And they're great long-distance hikers and bicyclists—as witness the two Interior Department girls now on a biking trip across Europe. All this leads to the fact that there now are plans for the establishment of networks of hostels in 18 States with strong possibilities for further growth, according to announcement by American Youth Hostels, Inc.

Federal employes will be interested in the growth of the movement.

Among the hundreds of delegates who will take part in the biennial convention of the National Federation of Federal Employes beginning September 4 at San Francisco, will be several from outside the continental limits of the United States.

These delegates, who are traveling thousands of miles to represent the membership of their respective local unions, are coming from Honolulu, San Juan and Corozal, Panama Canal Zone.

Carl E. Bondegard and O. A. Greenwood will represent Local Union, No. 127, Honolulu; Frank R. Hannen is the delegate of Local Union, No. 222, San Juan, and L. J. McAllister is the alternate; and Mrs. Anna L. Kee is being sent to San Francisco by Local Union, No. 595, Corozal.

According to Secretary-Treasurer Gertrude M. McNally, delegates will be present from every State of the Union and the District of Columbia, and attendance will be the largest in the organization's 22-year history.

Members of the National Federation of Federal Employes are employed in all branches of the Federal service except the postal service and are located throughout the United States and its possessions and in more than 50 foreign countries.

ADRIANA

By George Dyer

A Story of Love and Intrigue in Vineyard Sound

Chapter 12

A BLACK KNOB stuck up from a hatch near the Patria's bow, and immediately a man exploded on deck and ran aft, picking up a boat hook as he ran. He came to the stern, and stood in bewildered indecision—a small man, in dark blue bell-bottomed pants, and a jersey with the word "Patria" straggling across the chest. He looked tiny and inadequate on top of the Patria's broad transom; his boat hook appeared willowy.

"You can't do not'ing wit' dat boat hook——" cried Hansen, but the rest of his advice was drowned in a bellow from the approaching boat. Another man came into view through the windows of the Patria's high after deckhouse. He was a broad man, in a boil of activity. He appeared in the doorway of the cabin, and threw a couple of long seat cushions at the sailor on the stern.

He spun out of sight, and showed his round back to us as he bent over some fumbling occupation within the cabin. The sailor at the stern did as he was told, but the cushions looked too thin to be of much service. Adriana vanished from beside me—I found out later, to put the bumpers she had brought on deck between the Adriana and the fishing boat inside, where the shock must be almost as great as at the point of collision.

A metallic sound of churning now whipped down the wind from the approaching boat, and the black holes in her stern spouted clouds of stinking blue smoke. We could hear the cold motors coughing as this unexpected demand was made upon them; then they settled down to work with a roar, but it was too late.

When the engines were started the Patria was already within 25 or 30 feet of us, and the propellers apparently had no time to get a grip on the water. If anything the great white boat seemed to rush down upon us faster than before.

"Hold on, everybody!" yelled Capt. Matt, and the Patria crashed stern-first into the side of the Adriana.

GEORGE DYER

Only, in the last few seconds before the meeting, the moving boat's screws seemed to take hold. A mound of seething water appeared in the narrow space between the two craft; the Adriana leaned outward a little, like a man who crouches to take a blow on his shoulder.

The noise of the impact was not so great, thanks to the Patria's cushion, and to two thicknesses of blue mattress from the Adriana's main cabin, which the girl, miraculously, had time to go down and hand up to Capt. Matt, and he to insert in the last split instant before contact. But the worst moment was afterward, when the Patria with all her momentum thrust, like a fighting bull, or a heel on an egg, against the side of my yawl, and a great complaint of straining woodwork arose, not so much from the Adriana herself, I think, as from the fishing boats behind, and the wharf behind them.

IF ANY human agency (except those hands which had built her so honestly) was responsible for preventing the Adrana from being stove in, it was the Portuguese fishermen in the boat to which mine was tied. After they had yelled enough to satisfy themselves, they shut up and bent over the rail of their craft and started to shove it (and mine) away from the third boat. Fortunately, the lines between were rather slack and they were able to put perhaps a couple of feet between them and their neighbor on the inside. Thus, when Raskin's boat struck, the shock was divided in two, and not only divided, but reduced by the amount of energy needed to push the Adriana and the first fishing boat broadside across those critical two feet. The second crash was louder than the first (being less muffled), and it was then that Capt. Matt's wharf began to protest, and the piles to bend backward, and the shack on top to stagger.

But nothing let go, and almost before I could realize that we were relatively unhurt, the whole business was over. The Patria was answering to her engines and showing her port side as she felt the wind and her rudder. The two cushions from her deckhouse (which the sailor had let go to grab support) were floating on the foaming muddy water between us. Capt. Matt had lifted the blue mattresses and was joining the girl in an anxious inspection of the Adriana's hull. And out of the companionway of my boat was thrust up a large, gray, startled head.

With the Patrtio under control and idling ahead into the wind, the big man in her deckhouse leaned out of one of the windows and called to the sailor to come and take the wheel. The sailor started forward, and the following enlightening passage took place:

"You didn't put proper chafing gear on that anchor warp, you blockhead!" the big man charged, if not at the top of his lungs, still with no effort to prevent anyone in Menemsha village from hearing his words.

"I put on what you told me, Mr. Raskin," replied the sailor, in a lower tone, but evidently anxious to reach at least the ears of the group in front of Capt. Matt's whdarf. "There was hose and a sewed canvas wrapping——"

"Oh, no, you didn't! Or, if you did, you tied it on so it slipped."

"It was well lashed, Mr. Raskin."

"Well, then, you must have put so damned much on it was too large for the chocks."

"There was plenty of room. It couldn't pinch."

"Well, why the hell did the warp part?" demanded Raskin.

"I don't know why the line parted," answered the sailor, and we could see the men were now facing each other beside the cabin and the small sailor standing up square to the broad owner of the boat.

"You're crazy," said Raskin, by way of summary. "Here, take this wheel. Hold her where she is."

The sailor, with a stubborn air of no-surrender, went into the deckhouse and obeyed orders; the big man came out and walked to the stern. So, across some 30 feet of still simmering water, I got my first good view of Thornton C. Raskin.

And I didn't like it—a lot.

HE WAS, as I've said already, a big broad man physically, but you couldn't tell how much was useful weight and how much was just something soft he had to carry around. The wind glued his fancy embroidered silk lounging robe to a pair of shoulders that were what gave him the impression of breadth, and a keg of a chest. But some of the chest looked as though it had slipped down under his belt buckle, too. With all that had gone before, I knew this man for my enemy, and I sized him up as automatically as twelve months before I would have sized up the guard or tackle I was supposed to carry the ball through. I gave Mr. Raskin about two hundred and thirty pounds, net, or a cool fifty more than I weighed. However, if it came to a vulgar contest of brawn, I was confident I could jolt him.

The same with a battle of brains, but here it was harder to judge my antagonist. He had a round, pink face, which he could make look completely guileless, as at this moment when he faced us from the stern of his boat. There was a certain amount of extra flesh around the eyes, but the eyes themselves were quick enough. There was an unnecessary chin underneath the main one, but it didn't conceal a good substructure of jawbone. His mouth looked spoiled, and too young for the rest of the face, but a dead cigar (which turned out to be a permanent fixture) held tightly in one corner of it helped to twist it into stronger lines than it might have had without this support. He looked pretty old—perhaps forty-five.

"Say, I certainly got to apologize for this," he began, his features spread from anger to as conciliatory an expression as he could muster. "I don't know what the fat-head did, but it must have been wrong. I generally look at the anchor warp before turning in, but last night I was tired and we got in late, and this place is pretty sheltered and I've never had any trouble with a line parting before. I certainly got to apologize. I hope we didn't do any serious damage. Who owns the boat, do you know, Miss Blake?"

"It's owned by Mr. Garret Marriner,' said Adriana, stiffly. "This is Mr. Marriner—Mr. Raskin."

"Not the nephew of the late Nathan Marriner!" exclaimed Mr. Raskin. "Why, my boy, I am glad to meet you. Why, that must be the yawl formerly owned by my dear deceased friend, Nathan Marriner. So, he left it to his nephew—very appropriate, very appropriate. A beautiful boat; I wondered what had become of it. I knew it well, in the old days. And to think that I should be the innocent agent of damaging it!"

"There doesn't seem to have been any real damage," said the girl.

"Ah," said Mr. Raskin, shaking a knowing head. "You never can tell about these things. Nothing may show on the surface, and yet some injury may have been done in the vessel's vitals. As soon as this nor'easter blows itself out, I must insist on your letting me tow you to the nearest shipyard, and have your boat hauled out and thoroughly inspected, at my expense, Mr. Marriner."

This was a new tack. I looked at Adriana. She shook her head slightly, and frowned.
